In Brief...

In honor of 'White Cane Week'

Frankie Jean Clemens, a free lance writer from Van Buren Township, has written a poem entitled: "Oh, To Be Able to See" in honor of the blind. We find it very appropriate to dedicate it to blind people everywhere during this year's White Cane Week sponsored by Lions Clubs everywhere who have helped so many.

Oh, to be able to see the deep, blue rivers flowing down around this sandy yellow land so sublime. If I could just see for one moment the faces of the loved ones, to reassure me of the love and trust in their eyes.

The sparkling new, wet dew in the early dawn of morn. Oh, to see a bright new sunrise!

To be able to see the huge fluffs of white clouds drifting, as the wild birds flying steps take them up, up, high into the beautiful, untouched sky.

To watch the dark incessants of night taking shape, as the mysteries of light and darkness descend around the cluster of stars and the rising full orange shining from on high.

Oh, to be able to see the array of orange, brown and gold-colored leaves spinning and twisting down the meadow lanes after the front of early autumn has passed by.

The winter's start-like snowflakes falling, cold and serene, casting diamond-like glitter over the corn stacked in the now-barren fields of snow.

As if God's hand reached down and touched this land. Tears fill my eyes.

This Mother earth is truly a miraculous and magnificent creation if you who have sight would take the time to walk, listen, see and know.

Yet, my eyes have never seen. I am blind, my fingers are my eyes, to touch, to trace, to feel. Oh, dear God, to be able to see.

That Certain Smile

IT HAD TO HAPPEN SOONER OR LATER. Bilmar's Supermarket of Romulus is the first in the area to offer the new 'Carter cookies' with the smile on the package. The store located at 36521 Goddard Rd., has shelves piled high with the new cookies which are expected to be a 'Hot Item.' Aside from the obvious attraction of the package, the cookies, peanut butter of course, are also good munching.

Going strong at 50

First Baptist Church of Romulus celebrates its Golden Anniversary this Sunday with special singing in the morning service and a dinner at 1:30 p.m.

Located at 11412 Delano, between Goddard and Grant, it was the first black Baptist Church organized in Romulus. The Rev. Charles P. Woolridge is pastor.

The Rev. A. L. Lightfoot, pastor of Ann Arbor's New Hope Baptist Church, is guest speaker at a special 50th anniversary service scheduled for 3:30 p.m.

First Baptist was founded on May 1, 1927 and met in homes until they were able to worship in the Bell's Chapel, which is located at the present church site and is scheduled to be razed soon. Rev. J. S. Williams was the church's first pastor and Mrs. Maude Malone, one of the founders, is the oldest member of First Baptist.

In recent fund-raising projects to beautify the church's sanctuary, Burcross Upholstery and Kentucky Fried Chicken, two city businesses, made major contributions to the cause.

The Inspirational Chorus and the Senior Choir will sing during the anniversary day, whose chairperson is Mrs. Norma Cofield. The public is welcome to the morning and 3:30 p.m. services.

Charter requirement

City wide tax revision due

By JIM BRADLEY
ANP Staff Writer

How much is your property worth? That's the monumental task that lies before Romulus City Assessor Dave Krause — to review, recalculate and adjust all properties in the city beginning in May.

The complete reassessment program was unanimously approved by City Council earlier this year, with only Jimmie Raspberry abstaining.

"The reassessment will start in May of this year and take until March of 1978, which fulfills the city charter requirement of a complete reassessment on the tax rolls no later than 1978," Krause said.

"In Michigan all property is supposed to be assessed at 50 percent of its market value. However, in Romulus we have some residential areas assessed as high as 55 percent and others as low as 40 percent.

"This simply means that most people are not paying comparable taxes in the city, based on the market value of property."

Krause pointed out that this difference was brought about by the airport expansion, freeways and industrial developments.

"The reassessment will mean all properties, including industrial and commercial will be reviewed, and adjusted per actual sales data taken from recorded deeds in the city. Also, all businesses not audited in the past two years can expect to be audited this year to check the amounts of personal property filed with the city yearly."

Krause said a simple way to estimate how your property will be affected is to compare the state equalized value (SEV) on this year's tax bill with half of what you can sell your home or property for.

"The reassessment work has been contracted to the Wayne County Bureau of Taxation, who will be working the city under supervision of the city tax assessor. Beginning this week, 10 residential property appraisers will be reviewing each residence in the city.

"If an appraiser should have some question on how your home compares to the records we now have and requests to see the interior of your home or garage, you should know you have the legal right to refuse entry. But the appraiser will have to estimate to the best of his ability the items he has in question," Krause said.

"All of these appraisers will have city of Romulus I.D. cards with their names and pictures. If there is any question about their identity, please phone the City of Romulus at 941-0666, where our city operator will be able to verify names and vehicle license plates of those appraisers.

"In preparing an article detailing how each assessment will be arrived at and what improvements are not assessed."

Krause said he could be contacted at the city assessor's office at 941-0666 between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. daily and will be glad to answer any questions residents have.

Romulus 'Livelihood Day' committee

Romulus is the only city in the area that has something special planned everyday during Michigan Week, May 14-21. From youth to senior citizens and from government bodies to individuals, someone will be honored each day of the 8-day celebration. Recently the 9-member Livelihood Day Committee gathered to plan events for the week-long annual affair. Combining a wide-range of civic, community and private business involvement, the committee included William J. Kramer, Salary Personnel Manager, Kelsey-Hayes; (front row, from left) James Skinner, Plant manager, Federal Screw Works; Robert Brueck, manager of industry-

Noise, pollution cited

City officials say 'No' to Concorde

Romulus City Council recently hung a big "not wanted" sign on Metropolitan Airport concerning the large Concorde supersonic transport. It passed a resolution objecting to the craft and sent letters to all surrounding communities asking for a similar resolution. They didn't have long to wait. Last week, Westland City Council created its own "Not Wanted" sign when it adopted a resolution opposing the landing of any supersonic aircraft at Detroit Metropolitan Airport.

Admission of the Concorde to Metro would stunt the city's growth potential and further erode property values in areas of Westland that are in the airport's flight pattern, the Council said.

Westland and Romulus boundaries touch each other along Van Born Road at the southeast corner of Westland the northeast extremity of Romulus.

Particularly affected, Westland Council President Justine Barns pointed out, was sparsely populated square mile area in the city's southeast corner, bounded by Middle Belt, Inkster, Van Born and Annapolis roads.

According to Mrs. Barns, the federal government will not approve Veterans Administration, Federal Housing Administration or Housing and Urban Development Department mortgages for homes in that area because noise and air pollution make them a bad mortgage risk.

As a result, residential developer steered clear of the area and Westland recently voted to rezone a portion of the land for light industrial use.

"If the supersonic transport was permitted to land at Metro, that one square mile of near-wasteland could be doubled or tripled," she said.

Mrs. Barns added that sometimes the noise gets so bad residents claim even the windows of their homes rattle. A spokesman for Wayne County Road Commission, which operates the airport has assured Westland that no plans are being made to land the Concorde at Metro Airport.

However, it was an opposite announcement by a WCRC spokesman that caused Romulus City Council to pass its resolution objecting to the Concorde.

If the Concorde is allowed to land at Metro, additional wasteland
will be created

In its resolution, Romulus wrongly stated that it was Michael Berry, vice-chairman of the Road Commission, who had announced a policy which would allow use of the airport by the large SST aircraft. It was Romulus who notified other cities of that announcement and Westland was quick to answer with a resolution of its own.

Because of the mistake, Romulus Clerk Leonard Folmar wrote a letter of apology to Berry, informing him the statement was made by Mitchell Zolk, deputy managing director of the Wayne County Road Commission.

According to Folmar, Zolk told the news media a policy had been formed which would allow landing of the Concorde. Now, it seems, the policy has been changed.

However, another batch of the corrected version of Romulus City Council's resolution had been sent to all the ones the original one was sent to.

In that original resolution, Romulus Councilman Jimmie Raspberry, supported by William Oakley, said the Concorde was too noisy and emitted too many fumes to be safe. Council members Beverly McNally, Joan Lee, Fred Block and Gerry Canejo voted yes and Robert Martin abstained.

Dumpster complaints cause new schedules

Romulus residents are spring cleaning at a much faster rate than city officials ever expected.

Because of the increased demand, the two dumpsters located at the Department of Public Works (DPW) yard, 34100 Goddard Road, will be available to Romulus residents from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday, and beginning April 30, from 9:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. on Saturdays.

Complaints have been registered recently with the City's Information Hotline by residents who have been turned away from the disposal facility because supply exceeded capacity.

The two 40 Cubic Yard disposal bins, although emptied daily, fill up rapidly, causing some citizens to be turned away.

Joe Kochanoski, spokesman for the DPW department, advised people to call 941-0666 ext. 70-71, before coming to the site.

Kochanoski also said that many of the articles being delivered to the DPW yard by homeowners will be picked-up by the city's regularly scheduled refuse disposal crews. The only exceptions are large items. The following is a list of items that will not be picked up:

Deep freezers
Dirt or sod or any other rubbish weighing more than 60 pounds or exceeding 36"x36"x36".

Construction materials, bricks, broken concrete, rubber tires, car parts, dead animals.

Tree limbs larger than four inches in diameter.

The city has a chipper that goes out every Friday. If you call 941-0666, ext. 70-71, they will pick up limbs. However, no rose bushes, or grape vines may be included.

The new Saturday service tentatively scheduled to run from April 30th to June 30th was instituted in response to several signed suggestions deposited in the "Suggestion Box" located at the Information Center in City Hall.

Public Information Officer Jay Young said he was "encouraged" by the response to the newly-inaugurated Suggestion Box Service, and added, "I hope more citizens will avail themselves of this service once they realize that all responsible suggestions are carefully considered and implemented, whenever feasible."

Residents will be required to give their name, address and driver's license number when making deposits at the DPW building, so this service can be limited to Romulus residents only.

For further information concerning this service and others, call the Information Hotline, 941-0666 ext. 18 or 20.

What's happening in Michigan

May starts off with Blossomtime Festival

Balmy breezes scented with fruit blossoms, trees bonneted in green, lakes and streams coming alive with trout and salmon and pan fish all announce that it's spring in Michigan. Besides that, when Michigan moves into May, all kinds of great things to do start happening, according to the Travel Bureau of the Michigan Department of Commerce.

This year's Blossomtime Festival at Benton Harbor-St. Joseph will be a month-long affair with a variety of activities taking place throughout

May. The traditional "Blessing of the Blossoms" will take place on Sunday and May 21 is the date for the Grand Floral Parade. For information on other Blossomtime Month happenings, contact Blossomtime Inc., Benton Harbor. Other favorite festivals rolling out the "welcome" mat this month include Tulip Time at Holland, May 11-14; the National Mushroom Festival at Boyne City, May 14-15; and the Highland Festival and Games at Alma, May 28-29.

Highlights of Tulip Time include the Klompen Dancers, the traditional street scrubbing ceremony, and of course the thousands of acres of tulips in full bloom. The Wooden Shoe and Delft Factory, the Netherlands and Baker Furniture Museums, Windmill Island and the tulip farms are only a few of the daily attractions to enjoy.

The Highland Festival and Games transpose you to Scotland complete with tartans and tam-o-shanters, the drone of bagpipes and the agility and grace of lads and lassies performing the traditional Scottish dances. Tossing the caber, putting the stone, soccer games and a collie dog show are some of the other colorful events scheduled.

Wyandotte's summer ethnic festival program gets under way this month with the Greek Festival, May 13-15; American County Festival, May 20-22; and the Mexican Festival, May 27-29. The festivals are held in Yack Arena and are a delightful way to acquaint yourself with the flavors and customs of other cultures.

May is the month of Michigan Week, May 14-21. During the annual 8-day observance, residents in local communities throughout the state focus attention on Michigan with a variety of programs and activities. The celebration kickoff takes place at Sturgis with the Gemutlicheits Abend, German party, May 13, parade and other activities May 14. Other annual festivities coming up this month include the County Fair of Yesteryear May 19-22 at Greenfield Village, Dearborn, the Fort Michilimackinac Pageant May 28-30 at Mackinaw City and the Grand Rapids Historic Homes Tour May 21.

Carson City, Michigan, lives up to its name with Frontier Days May 13-16, and for those who would like to just get out and into spring, the Chippewa Nature Center in Midland will hold a "Spring Free Holiday" exhibit and open house May 15.

One of the most extraordinary touring art exhibitions in the country is the Michigan Artrain and it will pull into Detroit's Amtrak Depot for a month long layover from Monday through June 2. The converted railroad cars house a selection of American art of the past and present and emphasizes that art is not confined to gilt frames on the walls of museums. In addition to original works on loan from various museums and galleries, the exhibition includes an audio-visual presentation of American photography and a studio car where Artrain staff and area artists demonstrate their talent.

As long as we are on the subject of art, let's mention a few of the other artistic happenings around the state this month. Cranbrook Festival '77 at Christ Church Cranbrook in Bloomfield Hills will include concerts by the Boston Symphony Chamber Players, Wayne State University Chamber Choir and Greek pianist Vasso Devetzi. The Interlochen Arts Academy at Interlochen will hold a Piano Festival May 8. Jesse Besser Museum in Alpena will feature an exhibit of 19th Century Michigan Artists May 8-29, and the Dort Music Center in Flint will present a Sunday Afternoon Concert in the Park May 29.

Sportswise, the Pro-AMA Half-Mile Motorcycle Race will run May 7 at the Fairgrounds in Ionia. The race will incorporate novice, junior and expert classes, and there will be an admission charge.

The weekend of May 21-22 will see the fifth annual running of the 20 Stages Rally out of Grayling, the third in a series of 10 events leading to a national championship. Performance rallying tests the endurance of vehicle and crew and the skill of the driver.

Admirers of stalwart steeds might want to make note of two Michigan Horse Shows scheduled for the State Fairgrounds in Detroit on May 12-15 and May 19-22. If you like a little faster pace, Quarter Horse Racing begins May 28 at Glendale Downs in Hillsdale.

The Henry Ford Museum Theater's Famous Early Movie Series has some great "flicks" scheduled for the screen during May. "Grand Hotel" leads off Sunday followed by the 1927 silent version of "Seventh Heaven" May 8, "The Big Sleep" May 15; and "Another Thin Man" May 22.

For rockhounds and lapidary enthusiasts, there will be a Gem and Mineral Show at the County Center Building in Kalamazoo on May 7-8 and the Dearborn Gem and Mineral Show at the Youth Center in Dearborn May 21-22. You'll find all kinds of beautifully handcrafted items — for yourself or for gifting — on display and for sale at the Michigan Handicrafters Mail Sale at the Genesee Valley Center in Flint on May 11-14. And May 28-30 you're invited to help Tuscarora Township celebrate their 100th birthday at Indian River.

That gives you some ideas of the great "see and do" things waiting for you in Michigan. For a complete list of what's happening in May, and the warm weather months ahead, write for a free copy of the Michigan Calendar of Travel Events from the Travel Bureau, Michigan Department of Commerce, Box 30226, Lansing 48909.

Volunteers meet

Volunteer 4-H leaders from Wayne County recently journeyed to Michigan State University in East Lansing, to be welcomed, educated, entertained and honored at the 21st annual 4-H Leadermete. The aim of Leadermete is to teach volunteer leaders about new programs available in 4-H, to help them improve themselves as leaders and to honor their successful efforts. Taking part in the recent meeting were local volunteer leaders Alan Stuart of Plymouth (from left), Agnes Cook of Belleville, Millie Pilrot of Flat Rock and Robert Cook of Belleville.

WCCC Regional Center nets architectural citation

The architectural design for Wayne County Community College's new Downriver Regional Center in Taylor was chosen to receive a citation at the 1977 Exhibition of College Architecture at the annual meeting of the American Association of Community and Junior Colleges (AACJC), held in Denver, Colo.

The announcement of the selection of the Taylor Center design for the national display was made jointly by Wayne County Community College (WCCC) and William Kessler and Associates, Inc. of Detroit, architects for the new facility.

The WCCC exhibit is one of 28 in the architectural display which plays a principal part in the annual AACJC held April 17-20. The Kessler Associates entry was cited as "exemplary" by a jury of the AACJC which selected the final exhibits. The following citation is attached to the Taylor Center design: "The design is direct and straightforward. The achieved simplicity can be observed in the selection of materials and mechanical systems, which together provide the sense of scale and harmony required in a successful building complex. There is a creative discipline which seems to complement both the exterior and interior space."

Scheduled for completion in the fall of 1978, the Taylor Center has been designed as a major vocational facility. The building cost will be $8.4 million. The site location is a 94-acre tract located on Northline Road between I-75 and Telegraph Road which includes a 7-acre woodland and is adjacent to a city park, both of which are significant to the natural setting of the building location.

When completed, the Taylor Center will have facilities for instruction in such vocational programs as automotive services, automotive body and paint repairs, heavy equipment and diesel repair, parts management, secretarial science, medical secretary, machine tool laboratory, metallurgy, welding and fabrication, civil technology, nursing, licensed practical nursing, nurse aide, optical technician, commercial art, child care, advertising, interior design, drafting, physics, chemistry, biology and business.

The Taylor Center is one of two major regional instructional facilities under construction as part of WCCC 5-year master facilities plan. A major center also is under construction in downtown Detroit, and is scheduled for completion in 1979.

Small gardens: 'Food for less'

Mini-gardens can provide lots of fruit and vegetables without taking up much space, according to horticulturists for Michigan State University's Cooperative Extension Service in Wayne County.

"Many vegetables can be grown around existing shrubs and annuals. Vegetables such as eggplant, tomatoes, kale, lettuce and okra are quite attractive in the landscape," observed Paul Bridgewater, Extension agent and coordinator of the "Growing Roots" gardening program, which is designed to teach limited-income Detroiters how to grow, use and preserve their own vegetables.

If you have enough room for a small garden, grow crops that give you the most yield for the least amount of space. These crops include lettuce, onions, beans and bush squash. Avoid planting cucumber, melons, potatoes and dry beans, which need a lot of room.

Radishes, leaf lettuce, herbs, onions, tomatoes, pole beans and many others can be grown in containers or in little clearings in the flower bed.

Plant quick-growing crops such as green onions and radishes in odd spots around your home and avoid taking up garden space with them.

Miniature plant varieties take as much care and often as much space as standard sized varieties, but give much less return. Many miniatures yield only one-fourth the produce as standard varieties. Giant varieties take up lots of time and space and often don't produce vegetables for good eating.

You can interplant slow-growing crops like broccoli or other cool-weather crops such as kale and cauliflower between rows of early maturing beans or every yard or so in rows of lettuce or beets.

The century-old Franklin Robbe Farm on Haggerty Road near the junction of Huron River Drive in Van Buren Township was dedicated last Thursday amid the setting of the 1860s. The farm site was donated to the Huron-Clinton Metropolitan Authority by the Robbe's children and in turn was officially dedicated to the public last week. More than 30 persons turned out for the event.

Inside the old farmstead, the refreshment committee for the event was dressed in the garb of the mid-1800s. Included on the committee were Connie Etter (above, from left), Barbara Boelter, Diane Wilson, Jeane Wilson and Barbara McKenzie. Robbe Farm named centennial site

ANP Staff Writer

History buffs and nostalgic fans had a field day Thursday when the century-old Franklin L. Robbe Farm in Van Buren Township was dedicated to the citizens of the counties of Wayne, Macomb, Oakland, Livingston and Washtenaw by the Huron-Clinton Metropolitan Authority (HCMA).

Approximately 60 persons, including members of the Van Buren Township History Book Committee, local officials, interested citizens and representatives of Lower Huron Metropark (LHM) and HCMA, attended the ceremony.

Located at 12955 Haggerty Rd., at Huron River Drive just one mile west of the city of Romulus, the 65-acre site is to be made into a centennial farm by HCMA.

In remarks delivered Thursday, HCMA Deputy Director James J. Pompo noted that the farm site was really authentic — even to the outdoor restroom facilities. He added: "The Huron-Clinton Metropark system plans to make the site into a 'centennial farm' to be developed as a 'historical representation' of a typical Michigan farm in operation between 1860 and 1900."

Officials taking part in the ceremony included: George Giblin, LHM superintendent, who was master of ceremonies for the day; Mrs. Patricia Cullin, supervisor of Van Buren Township; Pompo; Joseph Didia, community relations officer of Van Buren Township; Mrs. Diane Wilson, co-chairperson of the township's history book committee; Judge Henry Zaborowski, 34th District Court, and member of bicentennial committee; and Mrs. Connie Etter, research chairman of the history book committee.

Mrs. Cathy Horste, who is most responsible for Van Buren's new history book, "Water Under The Bridge — A History of Van Buren Township", was in Beyer Hospital and unable to attend the ceremony.

"It's really too bad that Cathy couldn't be here today," Mrs. Cullin said after the ceremony. "She's the one person most responsible for our history book being written. She's spent untold hours, along with Diane Wilson, to bring the history book to fulfillment."

In a short speech to the audience, Mrs. Cullin said: "We want to thank the Robbe family for donating this farm so that it can be restored and children of today can see how things used to be 100 years ago."

Mrs. Wilson then read a short excerpt from "Water Under The Bridge". She told how early settlers arrived in the area as early as 1825 and settled near the site of the Detroit Edison Dam, an area which later came to be known as French Landing.

The officials unveiled a plaque on a granite boulder — which reads as follows:

"This granite boulder marks the early Michigan farm site of Franklin L. and Maria F. Robbe. The gift of this farm by their children — Edith (Robbe) Lindsay and George B. Robbe — to the Huron-Clinton Metropolitan Authority is gratefully appreciated by the public."

A sister to George, Edith was Franklin Robbe's daughter. She died June 20, 1970 at the age of 92. Her husband, George Lindsay, passed away on March 16, 1976, at the age of 96.

Also attending the ceremony were Belleville Mayor Justin Emerson; Mrs. Phyllis Greer and Douglas Brown, representing the Van Buren School District, and several other prominent citizens of Van Buren Township and Belleville.

Serving refreshments was a five-woman committee all dressed in the garb of 100 years ago. They included: Connie Etter, Barbara Boelter, Diane Wilson, Jeane Wilson and Barbara McKenzie.

The farm site presently includes a large farm house, two barns, pig pens, chicken house, milk house, garage, wagon or tool shed, granary, outdoor privy, hay barn, and hickory smoke house. Building conditions vary from good to poor.

According to authority officials, present development plans include the repair and preservation of only those buildings which have potential for contributing to the creation of the historic farm. The farm house may become a center for a naturalist, who will be part of the farm staff, according to authority publicist John K. Sterling, Jr. Other buildings will be used to exhibit farm tools and one barn will house animals.

At the present time, the HCMA does not have a fixed date on which to begin development of the project located adjacent to Lower Huron Metropark in the southeast corner of Van Buren Township.

But just strolling the grounds of the historical farm seemed to bring a sense of respect for the slower life enjoyed by the residents of French Landing more than 100 years ago.

Welcome, Jim!

In an effort to give The Belleville Enterprise and The Romulus Roman readers more local coverage, Associated Newspapers has stationed reporter Jim Bradley in its Belleville Office. "I just love the small-town flavor of Belleville," said Jim, "and look forward to meeting new friends as I cover the five community areas of Belleville, Van Buren Township, Sumpter Township, Romulus and Huron Township." Bradley wants to hear from local residents about what's happening in their area. Romulus and Huron residents can call him at 941-1250 and Belleville, Van Buren and Sumpter citizens may phone Jim at 697-9191. Welcoming Jim to Belleville were several well-known area people — Dorothy Schroeder (from left), first vice-president of Belleville-Area Chamber of Commerce; Ted C. Kuckelman, executive secretary of the Chamber; Belleville Mayor Justin Emerson; Van Buren Township Supervisor Patricia Cullin and Chalmers "Chum" Stockwell, a long-time Belleville resident and area director of the Lions' Clubs. — ANP photo.

Jaycees stage drive for electoral change

Would you like to be able to vote directly for the President of the United States and do away with the electoral college?

The Romulus Jaycees would, and they're starting a petition drive to eliminate the electoral college and elect the President by popular vote.

"We're inviting every citizen in America to join the Jaycees in this effort to elect the President by popular vote," said Romulus Jaycee President Andrew Miller. "The electoral college consists of people appointed in each state by each party to vote for the candidate of their choice for President, if their party receives the majority of the popular vote."

"And it is not necessary to vote for the candidate receiving the most popular votes," Miller pointed out. "They can vote for anyone they please. To replace this, we need Direct Presidential Election, where the candidate receiving the most popular votes would be our new President."

"Every vote would be equal. Your Michigan vote would be the same as one from Kansas or any other state."

Miller said that in order to change the present system, citizens must get involved.

"And they can — by writing their Congressman or Michigan Senator in Washington, D.C., urging them to pass an amendment to the Constitution to permit a direct Presidential election and eliminate the Electoral College."

Charles Dick, lifetime Romulus Jaycee, said the group is starting now because it takes a long time to get such a task accomplished.

"It must be ratified by two-thirds of the states to become law," Dick said.

Petitions planned to be distributed by Romulus Jaycees reads: "We, the undersigned constituents, do urge you Senator, Representative, to introduce and vote affirmatively, in your respective house, for legislation that will amend the U.S. Constitution to provide for direct Presidential election by the American voters and elimination of the Electoral College as a means to the President's election."

Miller has been in touch with the Lou Gordon television program and may appear with the well-known commentator to discuss the issue soon.

We the People picks officers, outlines goal

"We the People", a newly-formed group of Romulus residents, is moving ahead with its plans to seek more citizen involvement in the affairs of the city.

Holding its third meeting at Romulus Library last Thursday, the group had 37 in attendance, who chose temporary officers, outlined some of its goals and set up a committee to draw up by-laws.

Temporary officers include Richard Campbell as chairman, Andy Funchak as treasurer, Joyce Weber as secretary, and Activity and Membership chairmen Midge Prybyla and Grace Boc.

According to a release handed out by the group, the meeting was called to involve citizens in the problems of Romulus.

"This interest and involvement should come from the citizen himself rather than the politicians. The direction of our destiny should concern all of us," the release stated.

Mrs. Prybyla, who has been spokesman for the group, said the group is totally non-political and will remain that way.

She said: "We have formed an organization to help each other. We can attend council meetings, special hearings, read the newspapers and concentrate on items that concern the city and its problems. We should do everything we can to be informed with accurate facts."

"We can study and discuss our information so that any problem or issue we approach should be understood before we act. You must know your problems before you can overcome them."

She called for the group to work together to obtain better solutions for their problems and realistic answers to the many questions puzzling most of the city's residents now.

Listed as the group's highest concerns were water and sewer rates; the I-94 and Middle Belt clover leaf; property reassessment; Cogswell park; Sheriff Patrol costs; two new development plans near the airport; the Economic Development Corporation; the 1 percent tax on tax collections; airport expansion; the new open meetings law and the new rights to information law.

The next meeting of "We the People" will be from 7:30 to 9 p.m. May 11 in the Romulus library, 11111 S. Wayne Road.

More information can be obtained by calling Mrs. Prybyla at 941-2356.

Krause updates procedure on streetlight assessments

As part of continuing effort to update and modernize existing tax assessment procedures, City Assessor Dave Krause gained the unanimous approval of the Romulus City Council last week for a new schedule of street lighting charges to city residents.

The revised charges were prepared in response to action taken by the 7-member council last Nov. 30, when it voted to amend the existing street lighting ordinance.

The amendment was enacted at that time, on the recommendation of the Stewart Administration, to remove inequities in special assessment lighting charges.

The problem was that although some residential areas have different-sized lights, all were being charged the same rate.

In other cases, there were different charges being levied for the same size light, depending on whether the light poles were wired above or below ground.

To eliminate this inequity, a recalculation of nearly 5,000 streetlight assessments by the tax assessor was necessary. As a result, residents will now pay for only the actual Detroit Edison charges for lights in their neighborhoods.

Residents in neighborhoods that have lights with above-ground wiring will be charged considerably less for street lighting on this year's tax bill.

Krause also said he found a few areas in the city with streetlights that were not previously being billed.

He picked out that if citizens do not have streetlights within 150 feet of their property they will not be charged.

The lighting changes currently are being entered on the city's computers and will be placed on the July 1 tax bill.

The lighting charge modification is part of a comprehensive effort to remove all existing tax inequities. Krause expects the project to be completed by early 1978.

County establishes tornado watch network

Wayne County officials have set up a 51-station tornado watch network, which includes the state's highest vantage point — the roof of the 23-story Detroit Plaza Hotel in the Renaissance Center. "Within 30 seconds of a funnel sighting, our Skywarn program is capable of broadcasting a warning throughout the six-county area containing more than half of Michigan's population," said John Barr, chairman of the Wayne County Board of Commissioners, in announcing the network.

The tornado watch network will be manned by specially-trained volunteer ham radio operators when severe weather conditions indicate a danger of tornados in the vicinity.

"The 719-foot height of the Detroit Plaza gives us what probably is the best view between New York and Chicago," Barr added. "This could mean an important time advantage in getting the warning out when every second counts."

Those manning the tornado watch stations will be equipped with radios giving them immediate 2-way voice contact with their base station at the Wayne County Emergency Operating Center in Westland.

Other skywatch volunteers will man lookout points throughout Wayne County's 622-square miles when a tornado watch is declared by the National Weather Service (NWS). Most will be located in shopping center parking lots and along open roads with mobile radios in their cars.

"The human eye is the only effective instrument for spotting tornado funnels. Radar can identify the turbulent thunderheads which breed tornados, but cannot pick out a funnel unless it already has hit the ground and picked up a lot of debris," said George Young, director of the Wayne County Office of Emergency Preparedness (OEP).

With the base station linked to the Wayne County Sheriff's radio transmitter, a spotter's warning can be broadcast immediately over an inter-county police radio network covering Wayne, Oakland, Macomb, Monroe, Washtenaw and St. Clair counties.

Completing the Skywarn network, a ham radio operator will be posted at the National Weather Service (NWS) radar station at Detroit Metropolitan Airport in Romulus to relay information between the field spotters and the radar operators.

Barr said 110 amateur radio operators have joined the Skywarn program so far, but that at least 150 are needed to insure coverage of every spotter station.

"There are about 2,000 ham radio operators in Wayne County," he added. "If we get more than 150 volunteers, we can set up additional spotter stations to provide more complete coverage."

Use of the Detroit Plaza as a Skywarn location was requested because it provides an unobstructed view to the west and southwest, the general direction from which most tornado-spawning storms move in, Barr said.

"The citizens who have volunteered as spotters and the management of the Detroit Plaza Hotel deserve to be commended for their public service."

Skywarn was organized a year ago by the Wayne County OEP in cooperation with the NWS. Sixty ham volunteers were trained in the first season.

NWS trains Skywarn volunteers in identifying the turbulent, lightning-streaked thunderheads which spawn tornados. Volunteers attend a 3-hour class at the Wayne County OEP, located on the grounds of Wayne County General Hospital in Westland.

Young said Skywarn will swing into action whenever the NWS declares a tornado watch, which means that tornado-producing storm conditions exist, but no funnels actually have been sighted.

A tornado warning is declared once a funnel has been sighted. April, May and June are considered the tornado season in Michigan and the Great Lakes region, with May being the period of greatest frequency, Young said. A tornado touched down for times west of Battle Creek April 2, destroying or severely damaging some 40 homes and businesses. A boy, 5, died when his father's car was overturned. Damage was estimated at $3 million.

'...our Skywarn program is capable of broadcasting a warning...'

Amateur radio operators interested in attending are asked to contact the Wayne County Office of Emergency Preparedness at 326-0811 for further information.

State Bar supports federal gun control

The 16,000-member State Bar of Michigan has taken another major step in increasing the public's access to needed legal services by permitting attorneys to self-designate areas of law practices.

Michigan already is the first state to allow attorneys to list specified biographical, educational and professional information about themselves in the Yellow Pages of the telephone directory. The Bar of its Representative Assembly voted to add to that by letting attorneys also list one or more specific areas of law in which they are engaged.

The assembly, which is the Bar's policy-making body, also voted that any designation other than "general practice" would require participation in 10 hours of continuing legal education annually for each self-designated area of law practice.

Chairman of the Representative Assembly Daniel M. Clark said the Assembly resolution calls for the Bar's Board of Commissioners, its governing body, to adopt a standard list of areas of law practice.

"The list will be based on a showing of a substantial number of attorneys and/or legal activity within each area," Clark said. "As new areas of practice evolve, they may be added to the list."

Attorneys may select their area of self-designation from that list and publish it in the Yellow Pages, preceded by the words "Area of particular interest."

A notice published by the State Bar, also in the Yellow Pages, would explain, among other things, that a listing of an area of particular interest by an attorney is voluntary, that his practice is not necessarily limited to that area, that the listing means that the attorney has an interest or engages in that particular area of law — not necessarily that he has greater competency in that area than another lawyer — and that he is required to take a minimum of 10 hours of continuing legal education per year in that area.

State Bar President Reamon said that the Board of Commissioners would petition the Supreme Court of Michigan to make the necessary changes in the profession's Code of Professional Responsibility to implement the resolution.

Airport medical center

A new emergency medical center at Detroit Metropolitan Airport gets an inspection by Archie MacDonald (from left), airport operations chief and County Commissioners Royce E. Smith of Belleville and Edgar L. Harris of Taylor. The center would handle some 200 injured in an accident or natural disaster, with staff from nearby Wayne County General Hospital. It was developed from a federal surplus "MASH" - type field hospital that was secured for $25 under auspices of the County Board of Commissioners and is valued at $20,000.

Health Code requires list of basic services available

(This is the second in a series of columns explaining the 445-page Public Health Code, a document unique to Michigan's legislative history. The bill, which encompasses a broad range of public and private health care needs, was drafted over 16 months, in an open process format during which 250 consumer and provider health care groups participated. If passed, the bill will have far-reaching effects on every Michigan citizen.)

One landmark provision in Michigan's proposed Public Health Code requires the development of a list of basic health services to be available to all individuals needing such services. Once the governor and legislature have considered and ratified the listing, the services must be made available and accessible to all persons in need.

Suppose you were a public health official considering what basic health services should be proposed. You would need to review a wide range of problems. For instance: —More than 35,000 cases of gonorrhea have been reported in the state in 1976. The largest group affected is young women aged 15 to 19.

—Alcohol is being increasingly recognized as the major source of drug abuse, more teen-age alcoholics are seeking treatment. —Thousands of children are not immunized against common childhood diseases.

—More than 1,000 campgrounds in the state must be licensed to assure sanitary conditions for the thousands of vacationers in Michigan.

Under the code, these and many other health problems must be considered by public health officials in drawing up a proposal for basic health services. These services may be offered through local health departments, or given by other state or private agencies.

The proposed Public Health Code calls for fair share state cost-sharing in support of basic services offered at local levels.

A 1973 inventory of public health programs reveals how complex the scope of activities has become. Public health must concern itself not only directly with "people care" but with places in which people work and gather, such as factories, campgrounds, restaurants, hospitals and nursing homes, all of which must meet certain quality standards.

Our environment also must be monitored as pollution increases. Public health is involved with public water supplies, ground water inspection and land subdivision, and rat control, among many other activities.

State and local health officials are working now to pinpoint basic health services. At a late summer meeting, public health officers will refine the list further. Then many citizen and health groups as well as the public will have a chance to review these services and comment on them before annual appropriations are made. The end result will be the assurance of basic public health preventive and protective health services for you, your family and community.

Bullard seeks bill interest on escrow

State Rep. Perry Bullard of Ann Arbor has introduced legislation, which would require lending institutions to pay interest on money held in mortgage escrow accounts.

"Most home mortgage payments include money to cover property taxes and casualty insurance on the home", Bullard said. "The mortgage holder pays the taxes every six months and applies the rest to the mortgage."

"The money for taxes is held in an escrow account until payments are due. In the meantime, the lending institution has the money to use without paying any interest on it. The mortgage payer, who already is paying substantial interest on his mortgage loan, receives nothing for the money locked up in the escrow account."

Bullard said that, although there is no exact figure on how much mortgage lenders earn from the use of escrow funds, one study estimated that nationwide it is at least $100 million a year.

"This is money that is not rightly the property of the mortgage holder," he added. "It is interest on homeowners' advance property tax and home insurance payments, and the homeowner should receive it."

The Bullard bill would require the lending institution to pay interest on escrow funds at the rate regularly paid on passbook savings accounts, or the lending institution could reduce the amount of the loan by the amount of its interest on the escrow account. The interest would be computed on the average monthly balance in the escrow account.

At least five other states have similar laws, including New York, Maryland, New Hampshire, Connecticut and Massachusetts. According to Bullard, the mortgage escrow accounts date to the Depression years when people were losing their homes because of non-payment of taxes.

"Lending institutions require escrow accounts to prevent tax foreclosure, or house fires from uninsured homes, from jeopardizing their mortgage investment", Bullard said. "Banks have been regularly using the money held in escrow accounts to make more money for themselves. For too long they've had free use of required funds and have not paid the fair rate of interest for that privilege."

Sale to be held at 100 Davis Street, Department of Public Works Garage, Belleville, Michigan on May 14, 1977, from 9:00 A.M. to 12:00 noon.
 JEAN BAUMDRAHER, City Clerk
 City of Belleville

A part of the public record is now off the record in V. B.

A strange thing happened last week, and once again it was Van Buren Township that provided the issue.

Several citizens of Van Buren appeared at The Belleville office of The Enterprise, with a request. They wished to know what the salaries were for three officials of the Van Buren School Board. Information that should have been readily available, since it is part of the public record.

We informed the citizens that we did not have the information, but it was available from the school administration.

They stated that they had called the school board prior to coming to our office, and officials there had stated that type of information was not usually released.

Believing there must have been a misunderstanding, an Enterprise reporter called the school board and requested the information on those salaries.

Our reporter was informed by Jack Hosmer, director of Business affairs, that information on items such as board salaries was not released over the phone, but the paper could formally request the information by letter, and that they would respond to that request within a week or so.

Mr. Hosmer explained that since there were many similar requests, it was not practical for the board to drop what they were doing and look up the salaries each time someone called requesting them.

The Enterprise reporter informed Mr. Hosmer that the information he had requested was a matter of public record, and as such, should be available to anyone, anytime, in person or over the phone. Unimpressed with the opinion of the reporter, Mr. Hosmer again stated that he would provide the information only after receiving a written request.

When the Managing Editor of Associated newspapers called Mr. Hosmer's office to discuss the Enterprise reporter's request for the salary information, he was informed that Hosmer was in conference, but would return the call later in the day.

In spite of the fact that a late night number had been left with Hosmer's secretary, no return call had been received by 8 p.m.

In the afternoon of the next day, ANP's Managing Editor once again called Mr. Hosmer's office, but was informed this time that he had left town for the rest of the week. When the secretary was asked why Hosmer had not returned the call of the previous day, she stated that the meeting had lasted until after 5 p.m.

Indeed strange things do happen in Van Buren Township.

One week, elected officials of the area are bombarded with complaints regarding the lack of public notice prior to important meetings. They respond to those complaints by making it even more difficult for the citizens of Van Buren to gain adequate notice of public meetings.

And now it has apparently become necessary for the citizens of that area to contact their newspaper in order to find out what salaries are being paid to their school officials, in spite of the fact that that information is part of the public record.

Since we at Associated Newspapers consider ourselves reasonable human beings, and concede that those Van Buren School officials are overworked and probably do not have time to look up those salaries everytime a taxpayer calls requesting them, we would like to make the following offer to those school officials: Provide this newspaper with the entire list of salaries paid to school board officials. We will take that list to our photo department and have Lothar make a wall size blow-up of the figures.

We will then return this blow-up to the school office, and along with the pot of glue which we will even supply, will attach this list to the wall.

By carefully selecting the wall for the blow-up, it would be possible for the secretaries to provide the salary information to anyone calling and requesting it, without even having to move their heads in the process.

We would also be happy to attach a copy of the enlargement to the front window of our Belleville office, although we would prefer having it on the inside wall so the people of Van Buren would have to come into the office, giving us a chance to meet them.

We will be waiting for the list if you decide to take us up on the offer.

On the brighter side

'Just like his old man.....'

By JIM BRADLEY
ANP Staff Writer

A long-distance phone call from Florida Monday evening brought back a flood of memories that took my wife and I back 10 years, to 1967.

Our 19-year-old son, Terry, had just called to tell us how things were going in his studies to prepare for a job with the airlines. After sharing all the news with him, my wife cradled the phone and we sat talking quietly at the kitchen table.

So quickly the time had flown. It didn't seem possible that Terry had graduated from high school last year and was now in Florida. We recalled that it was 10 years ago this spring that he began his first year in Little League Baseball as a 9-year-old.

And he did so well that my pride in his accomplishments led to some difficulty.

Take for instance the first practice session. He was scooping up everything in sight and after a back-handed stop and throw, I impulsively yelled, "Just like his old man!" Curious eyes turned in my direction but my concentration on the game failed to notice them.

A line drive headed for center field and a sure single until my son's lunging effort speared the ball. "Just like his old man!" I happily shouted. My wife's elbow jabbed my third rib and her stern look caused me to return quickly to my seat.

The coach passed us as we were returning to our car after practice and said, "You've got a fine looking ball player there." I admired his talent to judge ability. "Yes sir, just like his old man," I repeated, while the coach continued talking with my wife. He didn't seem to hear me, for after conversing with the little woman, he ignored me and walked away. I was hurt. Doesn't he know that I'm the key to his plans this year? Why, I could hold out for a large bonus for my son, or better yet, I could wear my son's uniform and look like a little leaguer in knickers.

Practice after practice went by and each session brought sparkling plays by Terry. Everytime he made a play, I shouted encouragement like, "Atta boy, son. Just like his old man!" My wife seemed shorter each time we sat in the bleachers, but I discovered she was just slouching down more in response to my shouting. By the fifth practice, she only came up to my belt buckle.

Well, we played the Charley Brown All Stars in a practice game. They had five boys, three girls and Snoopy the dog. Snoopy plays second base and is definitely "good-field, no hit". In fact, I doubted his ability to make the double play. His pivot leg was too slow. My boy played a large part in the victory. He hit the pop-up in the last inning that Charley Brown dropped to lose the game.

As Terry scored on the missed pop-up, I whopped my wife on the back. She flew three benches forward, sprawling headlong between the bleacher seats. "Just like his old man!" I screamed. After I walked over and congratulated my son for scoring the winning run, I thought maybe I'd better go back and pry my wife loose from between the bleacher seats.

My wife was reluctant to go to the first regular season game, claiming she had a sore back, punctured ear drums and embarrassed feelings. But I prevailed upon her and she decided to go.

We took our customary seats high up in the bleachers so we could see all the action. My boy went into the hole behind third base and threw out the batter. "Just like his old man!" I yelled. Heads automatically turned to examine the face of the screamer.

Frowns met my nodding head. Oh well, maybe they're new at the game. Terry's single to center, even if it did go 100 feet in the air, brought me to my feet yelling, "Just like his old man!" My wife pulled a veil over her face when the crowd angrily turned on us.

My son stole second base with a burst of speed and I was again jumping up and shouting, "Just like his old man!" I thought the bleachers were getting rickety until I heard my wife's voice from below say, "Will you please stop standing on my shoulders!" "Sorry about that, Chief!" I said.

The game went into the last inning tied, 6-6. The other team loaded the bases with two out in the top of the inning. An easy grounder to shortstop brought my son charging in. I felt confident he would handle it just like his old man. Something must have happened, because the slow dribbler went through his legs and two runs came in. "Just like his old man!" my wife yelled.

With the bases loaded in the last inning and two out, my son came to bat with his team trailing, 8-7. What a chance to be a hero, I thought. He struck out on three easy pitches. My wife couldn't help standing and screaming, "Just like his old man!"

Oh well, what do women know about baseball anyway?

'Bald Eagle' speaks

By BOB AMEEN

The relatively new medium of television has been described as possibly the most powerful force, for good or bad, that man will be subjected to in his entire lifetime.

In the area of news coverage, television is still somewhat of a neophyte, a fledgling infant just beginning to take its first few faltering steps. In contrast to daily and weekly newspapers which have been publishing, in some instances, for more than a hundred years, television definitely is an amateur.

Having worked on both dailies and weeklies, I have been exposed to the depth of coverage, wealth of details and adherence to strict journalistic standards that go into a news story. Also, having worked with many veteran newsmen from the "old school," I shudder when I listen to many of our top newscasters on the local scene and on the nation's major television networks.

Such phrases as "completely destroyed" or "dead bodies" which are uttered daily in the name of good news reporting by television newscasters, are a great big no-no on any newspaper worth its salt!

The average newspaper reader or television listener can be excused from not knowing what is wrong with the above, but for supposedly top "news stars" who earn from $50,000 to as much as $1,000,000 a year, there is no excuse or alibi for such journalistic ignorance!

An explanation is in order. The phrase "completely destroyed" is redundant, for if something is destroyed, it is destroyed! The word "completely" is unnecessary.

By the same token, use of the word "dead" with "body" is ridiculous! Although the dictionary gives one of its definitions for "body" as the "physical organism of a person or animal, alive or dead, it also defines it as a "corpse" or "carcass." It is in the latter context that reporters for decades have used the word "body" in crime and accident stories.

Equally ludicrous are headlines, many of which appear in our nation's leading newspapers, or are spoken by name television newscasters, as "Train crash kills 37 persons." This is impossible! A train is an inanimate object incapable of taking life. Such a headline should be stated: "37 persons die in train crash."

As explained to me by an old newsman many years ago, persons who lose their lives in accidents, crashes, fires, tornadoes, floods, etc., "..... die as a result of injuries suffered" in whatever incident took place.

Another common error is for television newscasters to report in the first few words that several persons were shot in a bar brawl, for example, only to hear a few moments later that two of those shot were killed. The rule-of-thumb used by newspapermen since time immemorial is "Get 'em killed first, then tell how later."

The list could go on almost indefinitely. Newspapers journalistically make mistakes, too, but considerably in the minority when compared to the young babe in the woods of television.

One of the biggest faults with television news reporting is that newscasters are no more than "readers" of the news. This was admitted recently on one of the major television networks by a household name in television newscasting. He "confessed" to what every newspaperman already knows — the news being spoken by your favorite newscaster was compiled by a "leg man" who goes out on the street to get the facts. Oftentimes, this same leg man goes back to the television station, writes the story in a condensed version and hands it over to his superior. Eventually, it gets to the name personality, who after application of makeup and brief rehearsal reading, spouts it over the television waves as if he obtained it firsthand.

Once in awhile, the leg man gets to read his own news. But, that usually happens when time is of the essence and television cameras flash to the scene of whatever is happening and the station can beat its competition in reporting it to the listening public.

In any event, both television and newspapers have their place in the sun. Every newspaperman will acknowledge that "a picture is worth a thousand words" and will just as readily admit that its television competitor capable of getting news to its public faster than any other news medium.

On the other hand, those in the television news reporting game know that newspapers provide more detail and in-depth coverage because of the abundance of time at their disposal prior to publication. Also, newspapers microfilm all editions, and news that happened years ago, can be summoned up at a moment's notice.

Although each has its role to play, television has a tremendous obligation and responsibility to the public over and above that enjoyed by newspapers. Human nature being what it is, the majority of us humans glory in being cast into the limelight. How many of us would object to being shown on local or national television?

Television can be described as having a fatal attraction to its viewers. It assumes an almost God-like aura of believability and infallibility to those who sit in almost stupefied wonderment as they watch program after program.

Therefore, it is incumbent upon the medium of television to weigh what emanates from their studios. Program selection and content are another facet in themselves, but in the field of news reporting, the television industry would do well to attempt to emulate the style and format of its humbler and less auspicious brother, the newspaper.

Health Beat

Alcoholism, PCHA Approach

By RUSS TUTTLE
Director, Community Relations
Peoples Community Hospital Authority

When you enter Bob Denton's office on the fifth floor of the Annapolis Hospital, you will see a black-and-white poster on one wall which contains a simple, but possibly profound, message: "If you need a drink to be social, that's not social drinking."

As we reported about two years ago, in a series on alcoholism and the program of alcoholism therapy at Annapolis, Bob Denton is a therapist at the hospital, and he's a recovering alcoholic himself.

We say recovering, simply because to date science has not yet found a cure for this addiction — and indeed, alcoholism is as much an addiction to a drug as is caffeine or nicotine or heroin addiction.

Chemically, ethyl alcohol — the intoxicating agent in any alcoholic beverage — is known as C2 H5 OH. And it's a drug which has legitimate clinical applications. To the alcoholic, however, alcohol is an anathema and continued use of the drug by these people will ultimately result in premature death or madness.

When we write "these people," we don't mean to suggest that alcoholics are evil or odd or any different than any other people suffering from a disease. Alcoholics, and no one really understands the complete mechanism of addiction, are people whose physical and psychological systems cannot tolerate alcohol.

Bob Denton was instrumental in establishing two additional systems of therapy at Annapolis. He calls them the intermediate group therapy, and the satellite group.

When an alcoholic is referred to the Annapolis program, he (or she) will participate in a specified group and didactic curriculum — the length and content of the program being tailored to the specific needs of the patient.

After the patients have been in the standard program for at least six months they are eligible to begin working, if they so chose, in Denton's intermediate group.

"There are several reasons for insisting that a patient wait at least six months before letting him attempt the intermediate plan," he said.

"First, and most important, after six months in the basic program, the patient has had at least that much time of sobriety, and while sobriety represents perhaps only 10 percent of a recovery program, it is the initial and most important step.

"Second, after six months of therapy, all of the patients have the same background and basic information as regards alcohol and alcoholism.

"Thus," he concluded, "these people are peers and are prepared to understand and relate to the advanced techniques employed in the intermediate group."

This intermediate group has been active for about two years, and the results have been gratifying.

Denton said that acceptance into the intermediate group is not automatically granted to every applicant. "We have got to be convinced that the patient is honestly ready to accept the responsibilities of membership and is prepared to pursue a course of self improvement and personal growth."

He said that analyses of historical data clearly indicate that most alcoholics have at least one thing in common: they are not yet ready to accept responsibility because they have not yet learned to live with reality. Too often they set unattainable goals, fail to reach those goals, and then seek solace in a bottle.

"One of our major tasks, then," said Denton, "is to help the patient set realistic goals. As these goals are achieved, the patient's self image begins to brighten, and he begins to understand just how much can be accomplished in a real — meaning sober — world. He then is prepared to accept responsibility, and the reasonable acceptance of responsibility is one important measure of maturity."

"I'm afraid," he continued, "that many alcoholics, and this charge includes myself, pandered to their addiction because they lacked maturity."

After a patient has spent some time in an intermediate group, he is ready to move into the satellite program. In the satellite therapy, there is no therapist in attendance. The patients interface and work out their own problems. Of course, by this time they are familiar with the Gestalt and Rogerian theories and display a sophistication of the highest magnitude.

Denton said he wanted to emphasize that at no time during any of the therapy programs is a patient "put to the couch and analyzed psychologically."

He said the most important part of the program is to provide the patient with the tools necessary to make a self diagnosis.

"Once this self diagnosis has been made," Denton said, "the patient is generally more prepared, intellectually, to listen and learn. And if that patient listens and learns, he's on his way to the real world, for him, of total sobriety."

Or, as Denton put it, a sober patient is one who is prepared to meet his responsibility to himself.

Van Buren decision defies explanation

Dear Editor:
I cannot understand the actions of our Van Buren Township elected officials who voted to designate the Ypsilanti Press as the township's official newspaper.

Designating another newspaper which originates in another county makes as much sense as designating a paper from Flint, Kalamazoo, or Grand Rapids as the official paper.

Since when did our township get so big and busy that its official happenings need published daily?

If the paper switch is a retaliatory move on the part of the township officials because the Enterprise reporters report it as they see it, then they should get out of the kitchen if it's getting too hot, as former President Truman used to say.

I was informed by a person at our Town Hall that more people in Van Buren Township received the Ypsilanti Press than received the Belleville Enterprise. Whether or not this is true, I do not know, but I believe it would be easier and more economical for those Van Buren residents who presently get the Press to buy the Belleville Enterprise once a week.

Why should I be forced to buy a daily paper from another county just to see if anything is printed about our township's activities?

I urge everyone concerned to either write or call the township office and express their feelings on this important matter. It is almost like someone might be trying to hide what is going on by putting it in an outsider's paper.

On another subject, I vote to keep the Belleville 48111 mailing address. If the zip is changed and we become Van Buren, half our mail will probably go to Van Buren County.

We are lucky Belleville still has a post office, considering how much consolidation has gone on throughout the country's post offices. Our mail delivery has been just fine, which is what really counts.

(Mrs.) Doris M. Johnson

Editors note:

The circulation of The Belleville Enterprise, serving the Van Buren area, is currently 5,500 copies, more than twice the number of copies (2,200) that the Ypsi Press is providing in the same area.

The point you make about the necessity of daily printing of the township's official happenings is quite valid. Associated Newspapers is the official publication for all of the communities we serve with the exception of two.

None of those other communities require the service of a daily newspaper. In fact, usually the cost alone of publishing in a daily is sufficient to discourage their use.

No charity on the ball field

Dear Editor:
It's that time of year again and the ladies at City Hall are planning their third annual softball game for the fight against Muscular Dystrophy.

Again this year, we appealed to Marie DeBuyscher, of the Romulus Recreation Department, to allow for one hour of field time at Elmer Johnsons park. She agreed to schedule the game.

Unfortunately, we had to reschedule the game with no thanks to Mr. Lew Warden, coach of the ladies softball team 2001.

His team along with Baum's team were asked to donate their field time for the benefit game.

The Baum team was perfectly willing, and we would like to thank them for their consideration, however, Mr. Warden flatly refused to give us any of his time, even when his game would have been rescheduled for the following day.

We would like to take this time to thank Mrs. Marie DeBuyscher for her time in rescheduling our game for June 15, 1977 at 7:30 P.M.

We would also like to apologize to her for having to take the criticism directed at Mr. Warden.

Thank goodness that there are people who give up an hour of their time for such a worthy cause.

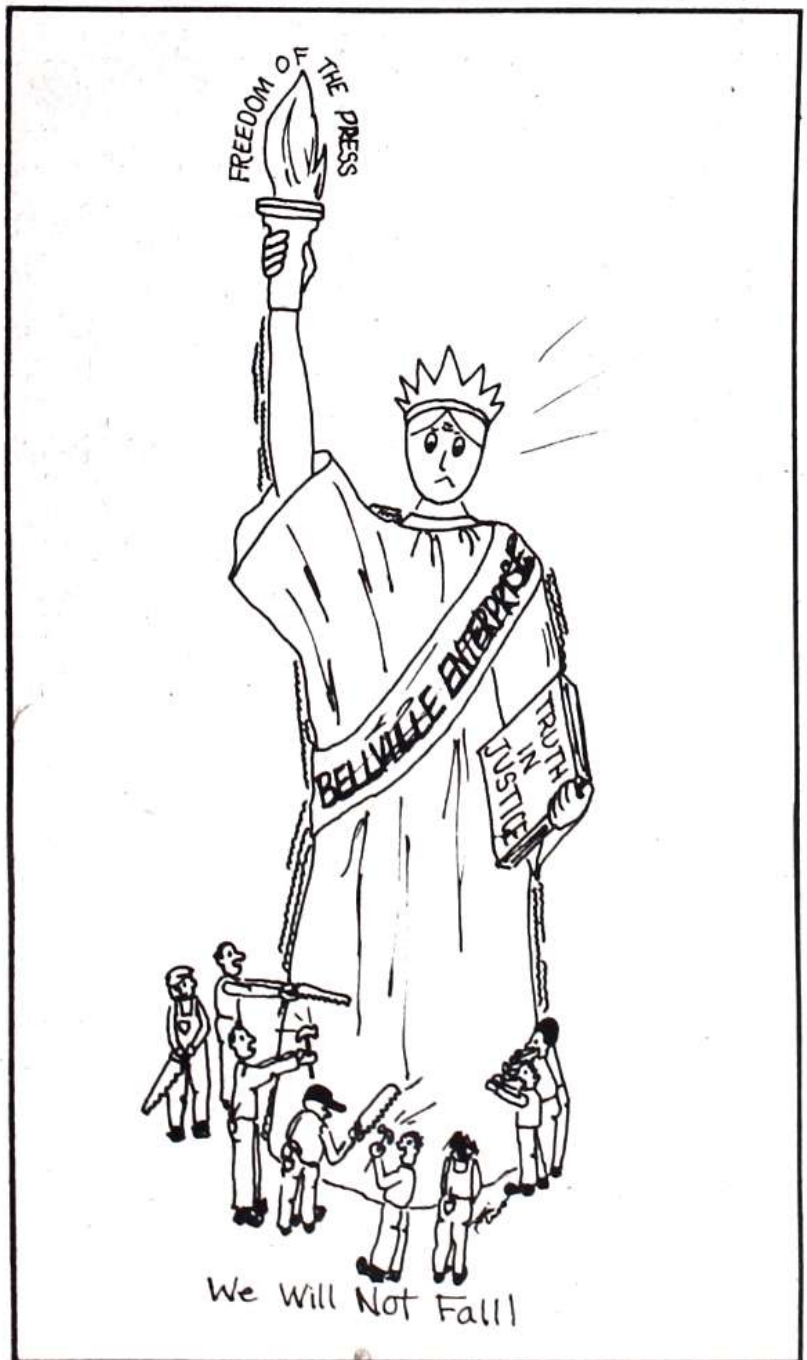

Jo Adkins
Peggy L. Wilson

Editors note:

Speaking on the behalf of some of the citizens of Romulus, we would like to thank this dedicated group of city employees for the unselfish giving of their time for this worthy cause.

It is unfortunate that there are some who are less generous.

From your lawmakers....

From the State House

PBB Aftermath

In a move that I supported to restore confidence in Michigan agricultural products, the house has voted to reduce the allowable level of PBB in food for human consumption.

PBB (Polybrominated Biphenyl) is a fire retardant chemical that was accidentally mixed with livestock feed which was distributed.

In an effort to remove the hazard to public health of consuming meat or products of the contaminated animals, the legislature in 1974 passed a bill giving the Michigan Department of Agriculture the power to condemn and destroy animals and poultry exposed to the toxic chemical.

Animals with traces of PBB in their tissues above .3 part per million were quarantined and subsequently destroyed and buried. Since that time, about two per cent of the cattle and 24 per cent of the poultry in Michigan have been destroyed under the program.

Since the 1974 law did not allow the state to indemnify farmers for the loss of their livestock, the owners have had to file insurance claims to recover what were often heavy financial losses. Of a total of 797 justifiable claims, all but 137 have been settled to date for a total of about $38 million.

Even though the contamination took place four years ago, there has been a growing public reaction to the possibility of eating hazardous food. There have been those who fear that all contaminated animals may not have been accounted for. Further, there is some livestock in the state which was contaminated but which is below the legal quarantine level. Some of these animals are sick and unproductive. Although such animals could be legally marketed, many farmers have refused to do so for fear of spreading PBB through the food chain.

Some farmers have voluntarily destroyed their animals, even though they will probably not be able to claim reimbursement for their losses.

At the present time, no one knows for sure what effect low level PBB contamination has on humans. There has been a difference in scientific opinion. It may be years before we really know just what effect PBB in the food can have on humans. However, I feel that if we are going to err, we should err on the safe side. We must take every possible precaution to protect the public health. Even through most, if not all, of the highly PBB contaminated livestock has been condemned and destroyed. There has been a growing lack of consumer confidence in Michigan beef and dairy products. This situation was aggravated by a Canadian boycott on Michigan beef, which closed off a $1.6 million annual export market.

In the meantime, there has been strong feeling that an attempt should be made to keep off the market as many animals as possible which are contaminated with low levels of PBB.

The bill just passed by the house will restore consumer confidence in Michigan agricultural products by letting consumers know that their food will not be contaminated by even low levels of PBB.

The bill requires the department of agriculture to take all reasonable steps to locate and identify livestock contaminated with more than 0.02 part per million of PBB. Those animals would be quarantined, destroyed and buried.

Reason to suspect contamination for purposes of testing would include analysis of independent laboratories or the department of agriculture, or a notice of contamination from the owner of the livestock or poultry. The department of Agriculture would quarantine any livestock contaminated by more than .02 parts per million. The Department of Natural Resources would be responsible for transporting, destroying and burying and livestock over the new quarantine level.

From the Romulus council

What about 4-year terms?

I would like to take this opportunity to publicly express my opinion on a question, I believe to be of vital importance to the future of the City of Romulus, namely the extension of an elected official's term of office to four years.

Immediately, some more cynical than myself, may claim that I'm advocating this change because of an over-riding personal ambition, or a newly-acquired lust for power. (At $3,000 per year, the motive certainly isn't financial.)

The fact is, I support an extended length of service for elected officials in order to enhance and improve the quality of government that the citizens of Romulus must have a right to expect.

For too long, the City of Romulus has been periodically wracked by internal dissension and political turmoil. Every two years, one faction or another, seeks to discredit and replace the incumbent administration.

The result is, that for upwards of 6-8 months every two years, energies are spent devising campaign strategies, rather than administering the government.

A four year term would change that. As a first-term councilman, I feel that two years is too short a time period for newly-elected officials to learn the many facts, precedents and procedures necessary to make sound judgments and good decisions.

It takes time for a layman in government to learn his way around city hall. A longer tenure would enable him to become more familiar with procedures connected with council business and with internal relations.

According to studies conducted by the University of Michigan in 1964, 54 percent of the 1,464 mayor-council cities reporting, had a two year term for mayor and 42 percent a four year term. The figures are similar for council members.

The point is, however, that the number of cities who have adopted four year terms since that study has increased yearly, so that now the four year term has become the most common in American cities. Others have seen the efficacy of this change and have acted accordingly.

Our neighbors to the East, the City of Taylor, adopted a four year term in 1968, and according to their city clerk, John Sable, "the quality of government in the city has improved tremendously, as a result."

Another reason why I favor a four year term, is that presently projects of a long-term nature are never contemplated or are unduly extended because investors know they will be dealing with an entirely new administration every two years.

Prime examples of inaction are the projected widening of Wayne Road, from Van Born to I-94, the black-topping of city streets, the Trouton Drain project that was long-delayed and the construction of the 34th district courthouse, which dragged on needlessly for more than five years.

Law suits have been lost by the city because a change of administration occurred in the middle of the proceedings, involving a new city attorney. This problem could be solved by hiring a full-time city attorney.

This constant change also increases the cost of engineering studies not to mention the costs of holding bi-annual elections.

Under present conditions, the employment rate of city employees fluctuates widely with every change of administration. This leads to inefficiency, inaction and a break in continuity detrimental to the welfare of the city. This isn't counting the several thousands of dollars wasted on unemployment compensation paid by the city to laid off workers.

A frequent change in administrations disrupts on-going labor negotiations as well, to the disadvantage of the city's bargaining position.

How can the city expect to attract qualified, experienced personnel to administer the government, when the specter of the unemployment line looms large on the horizon?

From the citizen's standpoint, problems are never solved or take an inordinate amount of time, because they (the citizens) must repeatedly argue their case and repeat themselves to new councils and new administrators.

Terms of less than four years allow a mayor or councilman little time to establish a record or to devote time to his job. If the demand is to prove oneself, their must be adequate time allotted to do so. A four year term is enough time.

If an official hasn't produced in that length of service, then vote him out of office, but, at least give him a fair chance.

Of course, a change of this nature also places a greater responsibility and burden on the voter. It is incumbent upon the voter to carefully scrutinize the background and study the public service record of each candidate. If that is not done, unsavory or inept politicians may assume office for four years.

Some may argue that it is virtually impossible for a voter to really know what an unproven candidate is like. Assuming that is partially true, then there is always the tool of the recall, if the elected official proves malfeasant in office.

The credibility and financial security of the city has been threatened in the past, because bills have not been paid due to a change of administrations.

Grants have been lost and projects abandoned or discarded because they were linked to a past administration, regardless of their value or advantage to the city. An example of this is the

The farmer would be reimbursed by the state for the fair market value value of the quarantined animals, as if they were in healthy condition. Compensation received by farmers from insurance claims, lawsuits or any other source would be subtracted from the amount due from the state. The Attorney General would be required to take action to recover the cost of the state payments to farmers from those responsible for the contamination.

The bill would provide for swift reimbursement for farmers. Up to now, farmers whose herds had to be destroyed had to wait for settlements of insurance claims or lawsuits to be reimbursed for their losses, which in many cases were very heavy. Under the bill indemnification by the state would take place within 30 days. Even though the most highly contaminated animals are thought to have been destroyed, we still face a lack of consumer confidence in Michigan beef and dairy products. This could have a long-range damaging effect on our important agricultural industry.

In addition, questions about the effect of low-level PBB contamination on human health have not yet been fully answered.

development of Cogswell Park and even the water and sewer problem.

The complicated but important city budget inherited from a past administration, can become a burden to live with for an entire year.

In spite of all the obstacles I've mentioned, the present administration and council have been able to accomplish much:

— We have broken ground for a new courthouse and fire station.

— We have a foreman's contract and have just settled a city employee contract with the Teamsters.

— Hopefully, we will be able to settle with the Wayne County Sheriff's Department shortly.

— The amount of new industry and building begun in the city within the last year and a half has set records.

— The city is undertaking a reassessment that will broaden the tax base to help pay for more vital services to residents.

— Federal funds are being received for continuing improvements to the quality of life in Romulus and the well being of its less fortunate citizens.

— The Help Center is providing many useful and unique services.

— New fire fighting equipment has been purchased and the auxiliary police force has proven to be highly successful.

— Developers have appeared with great plans for future projects.

— There is a new spirit and enthusiasm among city workers. Michigan Week will be a week-long celebration in Romulus this year, and is just one indication of this new attitude.

However, this is just an inkling of what could be accomplished with a four year term for elected officials.

I strongly urge citizens to consider the merit of my statements and take out a petition, available in the City Clerk's office, to place this issue on the September 12 ballot.

I am not so naive as to claim that such a change is a cure-all for all our ills and problems. However, I believe it is a positive step in the right direction, which, if adopted, will lead to better government and a better Romulus.

Kiss and make-up

Affections between the Belleville Enterprise and elected officials of Van Buren Township have cooled somewhat since this paper published editorial against a pay raise for officials. The Township's Trustee Board voted to give the legal to another area newspaper a short time later.

However, Enterprise reporter Jim Bradley has made his first mission in Belleville a diplomatic success. Bradley is now stationed in Belleville and if his first "scoop" is any indication of future success, he'll do a great job.

Van Buren Supervisor Patricia Cullin was one of several people who graciously welcomed Jim to his Belleville office and Lothar Konietzko, Associated Newspapers' Chief Photographer, was on hand to snap the occasion.

"I think Lothar's mad at me," said Mrs. Cullin, referring to the recent events. "Our Man in Belleville" sized up the situation quickly and said impulsively, "Oh, why don't you two kiss and make up?"

Whereupon, Mrs. Cullin greeted Lothar with a kiss on the cheek. "There, that didn't hurt a bit, did it?" Bradley asked the surprised Lothar, who didn't know whether to blush or smile.

Victory during times of uncertainty

During these critical days of energy depletion, economic recession, church and Sunday School attendance lags, budget deficits and leadership transitions, a natural sense of uncertainty and insecurity seems to grip the hearts of many. Is this the kind of emotional and spiritual disruption to which men and women are forced to accept? Are we to continue to trudge endlessly along in the trenches of despair with a whipped spirit? Heaven forbid!

Fear about the future is a pressing issue. And fear has a tendency to show itself in strange ways. A story is once told of two boys having a conversation concerning a haunted house.

"I hear you stayed in a haunted house last night. What happened?" inquired the first lad.

"About 12 o'clock a ghost came through the wall," said the other, "just as if there were no wall there."

"What did you do?" asked the first.

"I went through the opposite wall the same way!"

Fear causes us to do strange things, yet God's word gives a sense of hope and direction when we read in the first epistle of John: "There is no fear in love; but perfect love casteth out fear..." (I John 4:18)

God is on his throne and he already is victorious. Jesus Christ has defeated the final foe, death, and now releases us once and for all from the bondage which attempt now to strangle our spirits. Because Christ is victorious, so those who are in Christ are victorious, too!

There is victory ahead. There is victory during these times of uncertainty. The only question is do we want to experience purpose, joy and fulfillment once again. The answer is obvious, although the how may not be. Let's see what God's word has to say.

First, the Bible tells that the first step to victory is to rejoice in the Lord always. The Apostle Paul was not advocating Christians to become whistlers in the dark and to ignore our own needs and feelings pretending everything was perfect when in reality it was chaos. Rather, he was calling people to a life of faith. A faith, which remembered God's presence, always was with us regardless of where we were. The element of victory here is seen in Paul's words to the Roman Christians: "If God be for us, who can be against us." (Romans 8:31)

We rejoice in the Lord always for the major reason that we acknowledge the fact that man's needs can never exhaust God's supply. Rejoicing in the Lord, therefore, is more of an attitude than an activity. As followers of Jesus Christ, each person has the assurance that although one may lose some battles, God guarantees victory in the war.

"We are troubled on every side, yet not distressed; we are perplexed, but not in despair; Persecuted but not forsaken; cast down but not destroyed; Always bearing about in the body the dying of the Lord Jesus, that the life also of Jesus might be made manifest in our body." (II Corinthians 4:8-10)

Secondly, the Bible tells us to be careful for nothing or not to be anxious. A famed psychologist once said that 20th century man lives in an age of anxiety or uneasiness of mind. Anxiety produces extra heat, but not very much light. The spiritual source from which this state arises is man's trust in his limited self and his basic distrust of the limitlessness of God. How then does one face and overcome this feeling? Its antidote is a genuine sense of thanksgiving by which one begins counting the blessings that God has so richly provided. We then live before the Lord with a sense of openness and gratitude for life and all of its provisions. And we gain this kind of relationship with the provider and sustainer of this universe through his son Jesus Christ.

Finally, the Bible states that we are to make our requests made known to God through prayer and supplication. S.D. Gordon, a mountain of a man of prayer, once said: "The greatest thing anyone can do for God and man is pray. It is not the only thing; but it is the chief thing. The great people of the earth today are people who pray. I do not mean those who talk about prayer; nor those who say they believe in prayer; nor get those who explain about prayer; but I mean these people who take time to pray."

Victory during these uncertain times is gained through the certainty that God hears our prayers. Prayer is not changing the mind of God as it is asking God to allow his will to become our own. It is a time in which each person acknowledges his need and the one who can meet those needs. Prayer, therefore must not be random, rather it needs to be first given with a prepared heart and mind and then be specific so that when God answers, we'll recognize it.

Yes, we live during uncertain times. Yet if we would just be willing to turn our lives over to Jesus Christ who says so clearly: "I am the way the truth and life..." (John 14:6)

We can experience victory. Christ has saved us, the Holy Spirit directs us and God sustains us. We have so much for which to be grateful. May the Lord Jesus Christ help us to grasp the truth and potency of Paul's words: "Rejoice in the Lord always and again I say, Rejoice." (Philippians 4:4)

Bill seeks efficient electric production, use

Congressman William D. Ford (D-15th District) has organized the entire Michigan Congressional Delegation in a fight to save Wayne State University's Weekend College Program aimed at veterans, employed full-time, who want to further their educations.

Congressman Ford, chairman of the House Subcommittee on Postsecondary Education, launched the battle after the Veterans Administration ordered a cut in benefits for veterans enrolled in the weekend program.

"Some 2,800 persons are enrolled at Wayne State's Weekend College," Congressman Ford said. "They attend classes two weekends in each quarter, supplemented by weekly 4-hour workshops and by participating in educational television studies during the week."

Approximately 2,000 of these students are veterans, most of whom are working full-time and supporting families he added. For the most part, they work in factories and offices, and depend upon Veterans Administration benefits to pay the cost of the schooling.

"The VA, without warning, has arbitrarily decided that this Weekend College Program does not qualify for full benefits, and thus is threatening continuation of the program," Congressman Ford said. "Most of the veterans would be unable to afford the full tuition cost with their limited incomes."

Joined by the entire 19-member Michigan Congressional Delegation, Congressman Ford wrote to Joseph M. Cleland, newly appointed director of the Veterans Administration, to make a strong protest.

"We are urgently requesting your personal intervention to prevent what we believe to be ill-considered and high-handed treatment," the Congressman wrote Cleland. "The VA ... has arbitrarily decided that the well thought-out, well-designed and highly acclaimed Weekend College Program does not qualify as quality education, and is threatening to deny full benefits to the veterans enrolled in it."

Although Wayne State has asked for a deferral of the VA decision until after the current spring quarter, the Congressmen told Cleland: "We are not willing to accept a deferral. We are asking that you personally intervene to reverse this decision."

Without such a reversal, Congressman Ford said, many Detroit area veterans will have to abandon their plans to pursue a college education while working full-time to support their families.

Doctor says spray trees

Tips from the Garden Doctor this week include:
Q: What type of spray program should be used for fruit trees in our backyard?

A: An all-purpose fruit spray containing both insecticide and fungicide should be applied to all fruit trees beginning at petal fall. These all-purpose sprays come under several trade names. Applications are then made seven to 10 days intervals according to label directions until one week before harvest. Frequency of application and thorough coverage is a must for high quality fruit.

Q: Is lime needed on all vegetable gardens?

A: No, lime is only needed if a soil test shows your soil is acid. Most soils in Wayne County are not acid, in fact, tend toward alkaline. So don't apply lime unless a soil test shows your soil is an exception.

Q: How should the soil be prepared before seeding or sodding a new lawn?

A: First, eradicate any persistent weeds such as bentgrass, quackgrass and nutsedge. Construct the subgrade (topsoil may be stockpiled during this time). Re-distribute the topsoil or distribute other organic matter. Deep cultivate to a depth of 8 inches. To determine the fertilizer needs, have the soil tested. If this isn't possible, a general recommendation is to incorporate 2 lbs. of 10-10-10 per 1,000 square feet or its equivalent. Mix this into the upper 4 to 6 inches of soil. Level the soil to its final grade and seed or sod it. The soil should be moist when sod is laid on it.

Q: What can be done to keep the birch borers out of our birch trees?

Remove any dead branches and destroy them by June 1. Spray bark of branches and trunk with lindane the first week of June and make a second application 10 days to two weeks later. Keeping the tree growing vigorously by fertilizing and by watering during droughts also will help somewhat.

What residents should know about smoke detectors units

Recent public service ads and commercials have urged residents to protect themselves and their families with smoke detectors. Besides the obvious incentives, such detectors can save money.

Many insurance companies now are giving discounts on home-owner policies when smoke detectors are installed, and residents should check with their respective insurance firms to see if such cost cuts are available.

And to learn about the two types of smoke detectors being sold and where they should be installed, get a copy of a new booklet developed by the National Bureau of Standards. For a free copy of "Smoke Detectors", send a post card to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 645E, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

Smoke detectors work by sensing smoke from a distant fire and sounding an alarm, so you have time to escape. They are particularly valuable at night when you are sleeping.

The two types of detectors on the market use different sensors to detect smoke. Photoelectric types use a light bulb and a photoelectric cell. The smoke cuts the amount of light reaching the cell and the alarm sounds. This type is particularly good for sensing smoldering fires.

The ionization chamber type uses a small radiation source that produces electrically charged air molecules, called ions, which allow an electric flow in the chamber. Smoke particles attach themselves to the ions, cutting the electric flow and sounding the alarm. This type is particularly good at warning of flaming fires.

Because smoke rises, the detectors

Brochure explains consumer new act

The landmark Consumer Protection Act has become law, and many consumers and businesses are wondering exactly what the new law will cover and how it will affect.

Anticipating these questions, the Michigan Consumers Council has a new brochure, explaining the major provisions of the act in language non-attorneys can understand.

"Although Michigan's Consumer Protection Act gives both consumers and enforcement agencies a powerful tool to fight deceptive practices," said Executive Director of the council Linda Joy, "it needs to be widely understood and applied to be most effective."

"That's why we've designed a brochure which outlines the most important parts of the law. We've also listed the prohibited practices along with concrete examples illustrating each point."

Besides naming 29 unfair practices, the act gives prosecutors and the attorney general more authority to enforce the law and also encourages consumers to sue businesses they suspect are deceiving customers. If they win, consumers will receive actual damages, or $250, whichever is greater, and reasonable attorneys' fees.

Joy stressed, however, consumers should remember the

Offers counseling, medical services

SAFE aims at teens under 18 years

A new human sexuality counseling, educational and medical service for teen-agers has opened its doors in Wayne County.

Self-awareness and family education (SAFE) are the overall objectives of the SAFE Teen Program, a project sponsored by the Wayne County Department of Health and the Southeastern Michigan Family Planning Project.

The program is unique in that it offers counseling, educational and medical services to teen-agers under 18 years of age, a service long unavailable and inaccessible to a group needing such assistance, according to SAFE Teen Program Coordinator Janice Fialka.

"The SAFE Teen Program provides an opportunity for young people to obtain accurate information in a supportive atmosphere," Ms. Fialka said. "Often young people do not have the opportunity or feel comfortable to discuss their feelings, concerns fears and questions relating to their sexuality."

The program staff has specially trained nurses, counselors and doctors that encourage young people to explore their feelings so that they may become clearer about their attitudes and values, enabling them to make responsible decisions. The program also provides teen-agers with the opportunity to obtain quality medical care geared to their special needs and concerns.

The rap or educational sessions are co-educational, with male and female counselors leading them. In the sessions, young people are given the opportunity to talk about sex, how it affects them, their relationship with their partner, how pregnancy begins, methods of birth control, what occurs during the medical exam, venereal disease and other topics of concern.

Medical services are available to any female under 18 years of age. Parental consent is not required, but is preferred. All teen-agers requesting birth control must attend at least one rap sessions prior to receiving medical services. At the time of receiving medical services, each person will talk individually with a counselor and/or nurse about themselves, their medical history, method of birth control or other concerns.

The teen then will receive an examination by a doctor, which includes breast and pelvic examinations, tests for syphilis and gonorrhea, urine and blood tests and Pap smear.

All services are kept confidential between the teen and the staff.

If a teen-ager is worried about pregnancy, she can make an appointment for a pregnancy test. Young women found to be pregnant will be counseled on the full range of options available. Help in telling parents is offered, if necessary.

Rap sessions, counseling and educational services are free. There may be a minimal charge for medical services and birth control supplies. This charge is based on the ability to pay.

There are three SAFE Teen Program locations in Wayne County:

—TAYLOR-SOUTHWEST, South Health Center, 21201 Eureka Road west of the I-75 freeway, open from 4:45 to 8:30 p.m. Thursdays.

—DETROIT-NORTHWEST, Woodrow Wilson Clinic 11850 Woodrow Wilson, open 4:45 to 8:30 p.m. Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

—DETROIT-NORTHEAST, Beryl Spruce Health Center, 14502 Mack Avenue, open 4:45 to 8:30 p.m.

Tuesdays.

For further information on the SAFE Teen Program, call 865-7177 between 12:30 and 9 p.m. Monday through Friday.

A big insurance company doesn't have to act like a big insurance company.

The problem of short-term financing isn't limited to big business.

Short-term financing, as any good businessman knows, is a function of cash flow.

Like when school tuition is due before the bonus is paid. Or vacation time arrives before the tax refund.

Usually you handle it with one or more bank loans. Which means one or more trips to the bank.

Now there's a simpler way: Instalene, the new revolving credit account at National Bank of Detroit.

You apply only once for Instalene. Then, any time you need money, you simply write in the amount you need on a special Instalene form, then cash it at any NBD office.

You can apply for Instalene credit in an amount as low as $500, or all the way up to $10,000. You have the protection of minimum monthly payments. And the advantage of being able to make large partial payments, or repay the amount in full, at any time with simple interest. And Instalene costs you nothing until you use it.

Instalene. For everyone who occasionally needs help in covering the financial peaks and valleys of life.

And you can apply for it at any NBD office.

NBD Instalene.

Feasibility study slated for centralized court

County weighs justice system's needs

Wayne County will spend $25,000 as part of a feasibility study on the construction of a centralized court facility as an extension of the present City-County Building in downtown Detroit to meet the increasing needs of the criminal justice system.

The new court tower would house the Wayne County Circuit, Probate and Common Pleas courts, which now are scattered in three separate buildings.

The proposal was recommended by the Board's Public Works Committee at the April 12 full board meeting, following an extensive investigation by a special subcommittee on courtroom space.

At the same time, the board approved a $95,000 expenditure to implement in Recorder's Court a one-day-one-trial jury system similar to a Circuit Court program, and asked the county Fiscal Advisor to determine the City of Detroit's share in the cost of this plan.

Under this system, jurors serve for only one day or, if assigned to a trial, for the duration of the trial. The average jury trial runs three days.

The Board of Commissioners has been implementing several plans to speed up the court system and reduce the population of the Wayne County jail, including the ongoing Recorders Court crash program.

Edger Harris of Taylor, chairman of the Public Works Committee, said a central court facility was necessary to make the courts more effective and efficient.

"It has been well documented that we lose valuable courtroom time because we're presently forced to shuffle jurors, attorneys and other personnel back and forth between the three buildings housing courts," Harris said.

"If we centralized all court functions, we could make even more progress in reducing court backlogs."

Wayne County has 23 circuit courtrooms, nine common pleas courtrooms and five probate courtrooms in the City-County Building. Five Circuit Courts are in the old Wayne County Building and four Common Pleas Courts are in the Lafayette Building.

"It takes 20 minutes to transport jurors to the Wayne County Building and 45 minutes to get them to a trial in the Lafayette Building. You can imagine how much time is lost if a lawyer has more than one case a day and has to appear in two different buildings," Harris added.

The board has appropriated $25,000 to secure the services of an architectural-accounting firm to study all aspects of building a third segment to the City-County Building eastward to Randolph Street.

At present, this site is used as a parking-loading dock area. The City-County Building, originally designed to accommodate three towers, was opened in 1954.

"Expediency and economy indicate that an extension of the City-County Building would be the most practical solution to the problem of centralizing the court system," Harris said. "We need a comprehensive building program that will outline our courtroom needs at least through 1990."

Harris said the subcommittee would be continued as further investigation proceeds and that its members will continue to work with representatives of the county courts, the Michigan Supreme Court, the City of Detroit, the Detroit Wayne Joint Building Authority, employee unions, county staff agencies, the Detroit Bar Association and various proponents of the building project.

Adoptee organization presses for changes

Chapters are beginning to spring up throughout the state as adult adoptees press for a change in the current state law which permanently seals adoption records.

Adoption Identity Movement of Michigan Inc. is a non-profit organization, staffed by volunteers, founded following the work of Jean Paton, founder of Orphan Voyage in Cedaredge, Colo., and pioneer for the rights of the adult adoptee.

Members of state chapters include adult adoptees; genetic parents and relatives, adoptive parents and interested workers in the field of adoption.

Such a group has been meeting in Hazel Park since early 1974 developing an organization along the lines of:

—Educating the public as to the rights of the adult adoptee and removing the secrecy and fear that surrounds adoption;

—Establishing a Reunion File and Search Workshop;

—Having the Michigan law changed as to the "sealed" record; and —Providing one-to-one counseling for persons sharing similar problems particular to members of the adoption triangle.

Adoption Identity hopes to bring about the above stated objectives by working with adoption agencies, courts, legislators, adoptive parent groups and others involved in the adoption process.

At present the organization does not conduct individual searches for natural parents or for children placed for adoption, however, its Search Workshop reviews cases and gives suggestions as applicable to further one's search.

Adoption Identity Movement of Michigan Inc. is part of the changing adoption scene and one of several groups developing throughout the United States, Canada and overseas along the same lines, a spokesman for the organization said.

"We hope that you will be interested in our work and lend us your support," the spokesman added.

Membership in Adoption Identity costs $10 per year for members wishing to be included in the Reunion File, newsletter and Search Workshop. Those persons wanting only a copy of the newsletter, which is issued as input warrants, the fee is $3 per year.

Further information can be obtained by contacting Adoption Identity Movement of Michigan at P.O. Box 205, Hazel Park, 48030, or by contacting Tina Otway, coordinator, at 399-1290 after 6:30 p.m.; Martha Gault, community liaison, at 858-7186 during the day; or Phyllis McFarland in Ann Arbor at 769-3391 during the day.

YWCA public forum airs items of national importance

The right to privacy, energy resources, affirmative action and quality education will be the four topics of the Public Affairs Forum of the YWCA of Western Wayne County Mall.

The four areas of discussion are items adopted last year at the Y's 27th annual convention and are part of its national public affairs continuing program.

The first area — right to privacy — will be led by Mrs. Betty Burch, a practicing attorney, while energy resources will be under the "tutelage" of researcher and lecturer Mrs. Roger Wright.

Affirmative action will be discussed by Dr. Harold P. Fowler, associate director of placement services of the University of Michigan, while Dr. Cleveland Hammonds, superintendent of the Inkster Public Schools will discuss quality education.

Also on the forum agenda is the presentation of YWCA membership awards to churches, organizations and individuals.

The forum will be held at the YWCA Building, located at 26279 Michigan Avenue between Beech Daly and John Daly roads in Inkster.

For further information, contact Mary Willoughby at 561-4110.

Scholarships' signup deadline to be May 23

Western Wayne County high school juniors who want to compete for state scholarships for the 1978-79 school year have until May 23 to register for the second of three qualifying examinations, according to a spokesman for the State Board of Education.

The American College Test (ACT) is the designated examination for State of Michigan Scholarship. Registration for the ACT is possible at every high school in the state. The second examination for high school juniors planning to enter college in the fall of 1978 will be given June 18, according to the state superintendent of public instruction, John W. Porter.

The first examination was given on April 2. The third will be given Oct. 8. A student needs to take only one of the three examinations, Dr. Porter said.

The superintendent said approximately 45,000 Michigan high school juniors are expected to take one of the three examinations.

"Participation in this examination is the first step in the process of selecting state scholarship recipients," Dr. Porter said. "State scholarships, awarded on the basis of need, may be in amounts up to $1,200 a year and may be used at any of Michigan's some 100 institutions of higher learning."

During the present academic year, more than 17,000 Michigan students are receiving approximately $13 million under the scholarship program.

Students wishing to take the May 23 test can obtain registration forms from their principal or counselor.

Here's what to expect

Employment agency: Liaison for you, job

By LINDA JOY
Executive Director
Michigan Consumers Council

Many people each year find jobs with the help of an employment agency, yet some find disappointment and confusion. This Consumer Comment is designed to help ease some of the confusion surrounding employment agencies by telling what to expect if you decide to use one.

An employment agency acts as a liaison between an individual seeking employment and a business with job openings. When the agency fills a position, it collects a predetermined fee from either the business or the new employee. If you don't find a job through an employment agency, however, you don't have to pay a fee.

If you decide to use an employment agency, carefully compare the services of several agencies before choosing one. By checking a newspaper's classified advertisements, you may be able to tell which agencies specialize in jobs which would interest you. But be leery of ads which use fancy language without describing the job, or which repeatedly appear offering the same glamorous position.

If an advertisement interests you, call the agency to see if the position still is available, or if other job listings fit your qualifications.

A check with the Private Employment Bureau of the Michigan Department of Licensing and Regulation would tell you how long an agency has been licensed by the state and if there have been complaints against it.

Many agencies will request that you sign an application before scheduling interviews for you. Before signing the contract, make sure you understand what the exact fee will be and when it must be paid. In addition, find out what your responsibilities are if, for example, you accept a job, but leave after 60 days.

Under Michigan law, if you leave a job before 60 days, the fee must not be more than 20 percent of the wages received. If you work longer, you may be responsible for the entire fee.

Most contracts also will require you to pay a fee, if you accept a different job with a business than the one which was listed with the agency.

Employment agencies charge various fees, but usually the lowest rate is about 5 percent of the gross wage for jobs paying under $5,000. In other words, generally expect a fee around $250 for a $5,000-a-year position.

The fees usually increase by 1 percent for every $1,000 until you reach a salary level of more than $20,000. While the employment agency fee for these higher-paying positions usually is about 25 percent, the business often will pay it.

Some tax preparers face penalty notices

The Internal Revenue Service (IRS) has announced it will be sending out penalty notices to some tax return preparers beginning this month.

Under the Tax Reform Act of 1976, those who prepare income tax returns for others, whether self-employed or employed by a tax preparation firm, are subject to a $25 penalty for each failure to furnish clients with completed copies of each income tax return or claim for refund prepared, and for each failure to include their identifying number.

The preparer must sign each return or claim for refund prepared. If the preparer is an employee, he or she has the responsibility to sign the return, not the preparation firm. The penalty for each unsigned return is $25. The IRS emphasized that signatures on the returns must be originals. Labels with signatures affixed to the return, facsimile and photocopies signatures will not meet this requirement. The employer, however, is subject to penalty for failure to include the employer's identification number regardless of who prepares the return.

Both tax preparation firms and self-employed preparers are reminded of the requirement to file Form 5717, Annual List of Income Tax Return Preparers, due by July 31 with the IRS for the period beginning on July 1 and ending

June 30. However, the first return is for a 6 month period beginning Jan. 1 and ending June

Doctors link up with hospitals

Wayne County is moving toward establishing a county-wide radio communications system that would enable physicians in hospitals to talk directly with trained medical attendants in ambulances or at the scene of health-related emergencies.

The Wayne County Board of Commissioners has authorized the County Department of Health to seek an estimated $783,615 in federal funds as the county's share of a Southeast Michigan Regional Emergency Medical Services Grant.

The Wayne County Department of Health will seek the funding as part of a $1.8 million, 7-county grant application recommended by a regional task force.

Wayne County is working with the City of Detroit and six other counties in southeastern Michigan to develop comprehensive emergency medical services plans.

Commissioner Jackie L. Currie, chairman of the Board of Commissioners' Human Resources Committee, emphasized that his was an important first step in improved health services for county citizens.

"We are working toward establishing a total emergency services program for Wayne County," Mrs. Currie said. "But I want to emphasize that we are only coordinating what the communities want."

"The county, the municipalities and the Emergency Medical Services Council are involved in joint planning for the first time," she said. "We're getting input from fire chiefs, doctors, nurses, hospital and college administrators, and other people in the community."

Mrs. Currie pointed out that this intra-professional task force recommended the creation of a "vehicle-to-hospital" radio communications system.

"The City of Detroit already has a successful EMS system — and a portion of this new grant would help improve it," she said. "But outer Wayne County is almost completely lacking in ambulance-hospital radio communication and what they do have is spotty and unreliable."

Easy casserole

Combine handy, everyday ingredients — eggs, cheese and Birds Eye vegetables — to create a hearty one-dish entree that's perfect for lunch or dinner menus. The casserole could well be one of the selections for that brunch you've been contemplating for so long. (Photo courtesy Birds Eye sweet green peas or mixed vegetables.)

For your recipe file

Alot of good eating

Reach for some eggs, cheese, a package of frozen vegetables, a few handy, everyday ingredients and what do you do with them? Make an interesting dish with them, of course!

Savor all of the goodness of Vegetables and Eggs au Gratin, a hearty one-dish entree that comes right from oven to table — perfect for lunch or dinner. The flavored cheese sauce is cooked on top of the range. Then, in a shallow baking dish, combine the sauce, a package of prepared Birds Eye mixed vegetables or sweet green peas and hard-cooked egg wedges. Sprinkle with grated cheese and heat under the broiler till the top is lightly browned.

Enjoy the plus-es of this recipe that has so many virtues — it is nutritious, economical and so good-tasting.

Vegetables

and Eggs Au Gratin

2 tablespoons butter or margarine
¼ cup chopped onion
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour

1 cup whole or reconstituted nonfat dry milk
¾ cup grated American cheese
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce (optional)
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 package (10 oz.) frozen sweet green peas or mixed vegetables
3 hard-cooked eggs, quartered

Melt butter in saucepan. Add onion and saute until golden brown. Blend in flour. Gradually stir in milk. Cook and stir over medium heat until mixture comes to a boil and is thickened. Add ½ cup of the cheese, the salt, mustard, Worcestershire sauce, and pepper, stirring until cheese is melted. Cook peas as directed on package. Drain. Pour half the sauce into a shallow 1-quart baking dish; add half of the egg wedges and the peas; top with remaining egg wedges. Carefully spoon on remaining sauce. Sprinkle with remaining cheese. Heat under broiler until cheese is melted and lightly browned —about 10 minutes. Makes about 3 cups or 3 servings.

Sons born to three couples

Mr. and Mrs. Steve Lochli of Haggerty Road, Belleville, became grandparents for the third time on April 9. That's the date young Jason Matthew Tarry was born to the Lochli's son-in-law and daughter, Tim and Margaret Tarry of North Ridgeville, Ohio.

Jason is the Tarry's third son.

Their first child, a baby boy, was welcomed April 15 by Larry and Beverly Siersma of 2180 Lakeview, Ypsilanti. The new heir, who put in his appearance at St. Joseph Mercy Hospital in Ann Arbor, tipped the scales at 7 lbs. - 4 ozs.

Titled "Erik Matthew", the infant is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Eino Leppiaho of Belleville and Mr. and Mrs. Larry Siersma Sr. of Union Lake.

The proud great-grandparents are John Splan of Sault Sainte Marie, Mrs. Irene Siersma of Flint and Mrs. Marjorie Schmidt of Clawson.

CAN aims to inform residents about cancer

Starting this week the 4.2 million residents of the Detroit metropolitan region have become targets for the most intensive campaign ever to wipe out needless cancer deaths in an American city.

More than 2,000 Detroit area residents die needlessly from cancer every year. It is the goal of Cancer Action Now (CAN) — the new citizens' action campaign — to reduce that number to zero.

Sixty-one local agencies, organizations and institutions, with a $10 million assist from the federal government, have linked together in the first community-wide cancer control program ever undertaken in the nation's history.

The 5 year CAN campaign is being coordinated locally by the Michigan Division of the American Cancer Society and the Michigan Cancer Foundation in Detroit. The goals of the program are:

—To eradicate needless cancer deaths in the Detroit region (the deaths caused by neglect or ignorance);

—To improve the quality of life and length of life for all cancer patients in the region, regardless of their financial condition; and

—To show other communities how cancer victims can be helped better when all those who take care of cancer patients can work together closely. (The lack of such coordination in cancer specialties is a chronic problem in most communities.)

To help eradicate needless cancer deaths, CAN will attempt ultimately to reach every resident in the region.

The saturation campaign is geared toward motivating Detroiters to write or call CAN for a new cancer information booklet. The booklet explains in easy-to-understand language what every citizen can do to protect himself against cancer, and it includes the first comprehensive listing ever published of all the cancer services and helping programs available in the Detroit area.

Yearly editions of the booklet, which is entitled "A Better Chance to Live," are planned to keep the "Catalog of Cancer Help" up to date.

Several leading Detroit area hospitals have been designated as Clinical Demonstration Hospitals under CAN and will receive special help from the program to make the care and treatment of cancer patients the most advanced possible.

"Most communities could handle their cancer problems much better," said Dr. Michael J. Brennan, president of the Michigan Cancer Foundation and director for the Cancer Action Now effort, "if all the people who deal with cancer collaborated."

"But there are a lot of traditions of independence and specialization in the cancer field, as there are in many fields, and it's often been difficult for cancer specialists to get together, even when they've wanted to. We're trying to develop ways of making this easier here in the Detroit area."

"Cancer Action Now really is a 2-pronged effort," according to Edward Shaw, associate director of the program and communications director of the Michigan Cancer Foundation. "We're trying to do everything we can to give our community's cancer specialists access to all of the latest cancer care technologies, and at the same time, we're trying to bring our specialists cancers that are easier to cure."

"We could save 25 percent more cancer patients than we do, if more people would not only learn what the early signs of cancer are, but would act promptly when one of them is discovered."

Experts believe that one out of four cancer deaths occur in cases in which the cancer could have either been prevented or cured.

Program coordinators are hoping to get at least a quarter of a million Detroit area households to participate in the cancer awareness drive, and at least 400,000 Detroit area women to join a unique new program of breast cancer early detection.

Called Straight Talks, the new program is designed to help women overcome the fears and anxieties that so often keep them from practicing breast self-examination (BSE). Doctors believe virtually all needless deaths from breast cancer could be eliminated, if every woman practiced BSE regularly.

The Straight Talks program is being coordinated by the American Cancer Society and is designed primarily for women over 40 — the age at which breast cancer becomes one of a woman's most significant health risks. A Straight Talk can be presented for groups of 8 to 25 women, in a meeting room, club room or private home.

HAVE YOU THOUGHT ABOUT A TRUST?

Your bank's Trust Officer may be the best source of information about whether or not you should be setting up a trust — but here are a few thoughts to start with.

Is the size of your estate large enough to warrant the care, advice and management of a professional? It may be, if you own shares in a business, have investments in a securities portfolio, or have income-producing real estate.

Does your wife have experience with financial affairs? If not, creating a trust and selecting a professional at a bank or trust company to manage your estate's finances might be a wise move.

Does your will (and your wife's will) convey your wishes for the care and education of your children (or grandchildren, too, for that matter)? Selecting and naming a guardian and arranging a trust NOW may be the best way to avoid grim legal entanglements later on.

When the future financial security and comfort of your family is concerned, you'll want to attend to them promptly and while you're of good mind and body. We can help you pre-plan your funeral, but for financial counsel we suggest a local bank trust officer.

In organizations

Handicapped seek equal membership

(Equal rights confer equal responsibilities. Because of their disabilities, handicapped people often find it difficult to become contributing members of organizations. Bill Kiser speaks about that from first-hand experience in this column submitted by the President's Council on Employment of the Handicapped.)

By BILL KISER

In view of the importance of religious, civic and other organizations in our society, it is not surprising that the disabled desire equal membership in these groups.

The democratic ideal says that all people are equal and should not be discriminated against. Unlike other minorities, the handicapped have not been prohibited by law from joining organizations. Probably few of these organizations have had any established policies against accepting handicapped members. Most have been guilty only of thoughtlessness and indifference.

In the past there were sound reasons why the handicapped could not expect to attain equal membership in many groups. Only in the last 10 to 15 years have modern wheelchairs and elimination of some architectural barriers permitted the physically handicapped to attend public meetings.

Certainly, handicapped people's much lower than average incomes have contributed to their being excluded from many organizations.

My own desire for equal membership in many organizations is perhaps somewhat unusual. Clubs and organizations were not important to my father, and my mother could have been called an anti-organizationalist.

However, like most families in our southern community, the church was very important in our lives. I am grateful that my parents made what was then a very courageous decision — to take their funny-looking cerebral-palsied child, who could not walk or talk, to church. Looking back, I do not remember any question of whether or not I would be accepted there.

As I grew older, I began to badger my parents about joining the Boy Scouts. When a scoutmaster agreed to take me in his troop, I finally won the battle. I have fond memories of Scouting, principally because my daddy became involved and this was something we shared. When he died, my involvement with both Scouting and church activities came to an end.

The 10 years that followed, without any group association, were very frustrating. Then a dynamic group of young people brought me back into church life in my 20s. This group, largely single people away from home, gave new meaning to my life. They usually did something three or four nights a week, and I was involved most of the time. At this point I became aware of the other side of the challenge of equal membership.

Since I had a home with no family, they would jokingly say they were giving me free taxi rides in exchange for a place to relax and read, or listen to records. They at least made me feel that I had something to offer.

This is essential if the handicapped are going to enjoy the benefits of equal membership in any group. Those of us who are severely handicapped require the physical assistance of others in many cases and may find it difficult to carry our share of the load. Yet we must strive to contribute to the group effort.

As I grew older, the focus of my organizational desire changed along with everything else. Although circumstances never permitted me to join the Junior Chamber of Commerce or similar organizations in my young adulthood, my life would have been much richer. If such opportunities are provided the disabled young adults of today, their chances of leading happy and successful lives will increase. Age may alter our choices of organizations, but it does not change our need to belong to a group.

If we who are handicapped are going to enjoy the full rights of American citizenship, we must strive to attain equal membership in the organizations that appeal to us. Because this right cannot be attained by court or legislative action, all nonhandicapped persons who are active in organizations should see to it that their groups are open to qualified handicapped people.

Since most organizations continually are seeking new members, they should never overlook the handicapped in their recruitment drives. Then, when the handicapped are given an opportunity to join, they must accept the responsibilities that go with that membership.

It is utmost importance that all members — handicapped or nonhandicapped — contribute to the fullest extent they are able. Those few handicapped people who join groups only to be receivers not only cheat themselves, but also lessen the chances of other handicapped persons of equal membership.

CB World

Citizen band radios got their start in '47

By JANICE PLESIEWICZ
Nightbird - KNN5032

Breaker, breaker! Anyone got a copy on this Nightbird? Hey, come on good buddy, we have a copy on you. What be your 10-20? To anyone owning a CB (Citizen Band) radio this is common everyday language.

What is CB all about?

Citizen Band radio in itself is not new. It did not come about overnight. The Federal Communications Commission (FCC) allocated certain frequencies for the use of CB radio in 1947. At that time CB was used basically by farmers, boaters and, of course, truckers.

The actual "BOOM" happened when the national speed limit was changed to 55 mph to conserve fuel. The truckers wanted to run on schedule and at the same time know where the police were located. It was of importance to know road conditions and locations of service stations, motels and general information.

CB Radio became one extensive party-line. The public was not too far behind before they caught on to what was happening. The results are obvious and it looks like it's here to stay.

One thing everyone should realize is that CB radio can be a pleasure or it can be a headache. One of the most useful of all applications of CB radio has been to emergency and rescue work. There are many groups monitoring the channels, such as REACT (Radio Emergency Associated Citizens Teams), MEP (Michigan Emergency Patrol) and HELP (Highway Emergency Life Patrol). These groups are designed to assist motorists with local information, dispatching emergency vehicles, relaying information to local police agencies and many functions far too numerous to mention at this time.

Channel courtesy is of the utmost importance and I cannot stress this enough. It is this writer's opinion that without the channel courtesy, we will have nothing but mass chaos and confusion on the channels.

There are many things that everyone should be acquainted with before they enter the magical world of CB, such as FCC Rules and Regulations, Channel 9, handles, ratchet jaws and much, much more. In future columns I intend to inform you of anything I can to keep you aware of what is happening in the "CB World".

I would like to relate to you my beginning with CB radio. My first experience came about quite suddenly. I was shopping one day and happened to hear a CB radio that was on display in the store. I listened to it for a while, and then decided to try one out. I figured if I didn't like the radio I could always sell it. After having it installed in my car I sat back and just listened to it for about a week. What I heard was totally beyond my comprehension. It was mass confusion as far as I was concerned.

My next step was to pick a handle, if I was ever going to talk on that radio. I decided on the handle I wanted to use and the transformation began, I was no longer an ordinary person, I was "NIGHTBIRD".

Needless to say I picked up that mike and said "break Channel 7", when all of a sudden a voice came back and said "go ahead lady break Channel 7". Everything I had planned to say was no longer with me, my mind went blank and I reached over and turned off the radio.

It took another couple of days to rebuild the courage, but the next try was a success. I had finally asked for a 10-36 (the time). After a few days of knowing what time it was continually I went on to bigger and better things — the almighty "RADIO CHECK".

The next two weeks went smoothly. Everyone was more than willing to co-operate, and if nothing else I knew my radio was working just great.

It all came about gradually, but it happened, I became a CBer. It has all been worthwhile, because I have been able to have fun with the radio, I have been able to help people and above all, I have met some of the nicest people you can imagine just by saying those two magic words, breaker, breaker.

The airwaves are for the use of everyone. Your radio can prove to be an asset to you. If the occasion arises and you need help, it's there. If you want to pretend on CB, go ahead, no one knows you other than by your handle. It can be your fantasyland. Vacationers get the information they need. Many a long, lonesome night has been livened up a little for those truckers making long hauls.

You CB radio is a means of friendly communication with the "good buddies" out there. So go ahead and lay the hammer down and have a fine one. We're do'in it to it your way, we're clear.

Shopping calls for banker ...computer programmer

By MAUREEN BEATTY

The economical meal has gone the way of the 25-cent matinee movie, 5-cent ice cream cone with chocolate shots on top and free water (plain or soda take your pick) at the neighborhood drug store.

Newspapers and magazines have printed numerous articles on wise shopping and expert meal planning, but the subject deserves continual attention in the face of today's prices.

As most seniors know, managing on a fixed income requires the skill of a banker, the knowledge of a dietitian and the analytical mind of a computer programmer.

The best way to save grocery money of course is to eat your main meal of the day at a Wayne County Office on Aging Nutrition Site for 50 cents. Shopping then can be limited to breakfast foods, evening lunches and weekend meals.

Grocery stores do not cater to the single person or the family of two, so learning how to use up leftovers is a must for savings.

A good sale on a 10-pound bag of potatoes or a 5-pound bag of onions is no bargain at all, if half of them end up sprouting in the vegetable bin. Large cans of fruit or vegetables on sale are a blessing for a family of four or more, but for one or two it also can mean waste.

I lost money recently on a "Coupon Special" when half of the donuts became stale and ended up in the garbage. Once a week I could count on throwing away half a loaf of bread until someone suggested I freeze half the loaf when purchased. In the future donuts that can't be eaten while still fresh will get the same treatment.

Our dogs and cats feasted on meat loaf when we had it for dinner (at the price of dog and cat food this probably was savings) until I started making mini loafs. When I find a good buy on a roast now, it is cut into half or thirds eliminating waste or the inevitable day after stew. (I love stew, but from scratch.) If we have a rolled roast though, I cook enough to make hot sandwiches the next day.

Restaurant Review

by Lee Smith, ANP's Roving Connoisseur

(Sue McDonald and Maureen Rademacher filling in this week for Lee Smith.)

"If you haven't seen someone in a long time, come into the Golden Boy. You'll see them sooner or later."

And it's true of the Golden Boy Restaurant, located on Elizabeth Street opposite Wayne's Metro Place Mall. The restaurant, owned and operated by George and Anne Demetriou, has become the hub of downtown Wayne, attracting city politicians, public servants and a daily coffee clutch of prominent business men.

According to Mrs. Demetriou, the Golden Boy is not just any restaurant and is here "for more than just food," hinting that many an important decision in the community has been made over a cup of coffee in the establishment.

The Demetrious, who have been in the restaurant business since their marriage in 1956, first operated the Cameo, located in what is now the city's urban renewal area. After that establishment was razed, they opened a new Cameo "as a Coney Island" at the present site of the Golden Boy in 1969.

The new Cameo proved so popular that 1½ years later, the couple expanded the restaurant facility and changed the name to the Golden Boy Restaurant.

The restaurant features home-cooked food, "nothing from the can", according to Mrs. Demetriou, and the specialty items on the menu reflect that statement.

We visited the Golden Boy for lunch last week, skipping our usual sandwich orders for the dinners offered at the Golden Boy. Maureen chose a medium order of shish kebab, while I opted for the specialty of the day, lamb shanks.

The meal started off with small lettuce salads, mine topped with a tasty Italian dressing, and Maureen's, her favorite, blue cheese. Served with the salads was a basket of fresh bread, crackers, breadsticks and butter.

When the main courses arrived, we dug in with gusto. The lamb shank was served in a savory tomato sauce, with a serving of good rice pilaf and boiled potatoes on the side.

The lamb was tender and tasty, with the sauce adding just the right touch to the dish. The potatoes were cooked just right, firm and tender. The pilaf, made with real rice, had just enough seasoning to compliment the meal.

Maureen's meal... well, I'll let her tell you how it was.

I had never ordered the shish kebab at the Golden Boy before, but after tasting last Thursday's meal, I'm sure I will again.

The broiled combination of lamb, onion slices and green peppers, topped with a mushroom sauce over the meat, rice and whipped mashed potatoes, was shish kebab at its best.

The lamb was mildly spiced, not too much for the American palate, and quite tender. The hearty helping of meat (and this was the smaller of the two size portions offered on the menu) was stacked on the skewer between the peppers and onions.

Before digging into the main course, I had eaten a fresh green salad with a very creamy blue cheese dressing. I chose fresh lemonade with a lemon slice perched on the glass, to accompany the meal.

The shish kebab I ordered was the medium size, priced at $2.75, which includes the meat, rice, potato and small salad. I highly recommend it for a change of pace at lunchtime. The shish kebab also comes in a large size, priced at $4.25.

The Golden Boy, conveniently located near Associated's main office, has been a luncheon spot for us for years, and we've found their moderately priced meals stick-to-the-ribs good.

The menu includes breakfast items, available anytime of the day, including old standbys of ham, bacon or sausages and eggs, hot cakes, omelettes and steak and eggs. Sandwiches range from grilled cheese to hot roast beef to hamburgers to Coney Island hot dogs, with baked ham, tuna salad, corned beef and bacon, lettuce and tomato also available. Daily roast prime rib of beef, plus other selections like broiled New York cut strip steak, Chef's Steak and London Broil ($3.95).

So if you want to dine out, where the welcome mat is always out, try the Golden Boy, the home away from home for local residents. home made soup is another specialty.

Hearty choices of the menu included breaded pork tenderloin, baked Virginia ham, roast young turkey and grilled baby beef liver.

And for steak hounds the Golden Boy lists its specialty as

'Shark tamer'

Romulus' Paul Toy apparently isn't apprehensive about the awesome shark. He goes hunting for them and bagged two off of South Florida. Toy, of 37626 Westvale, is pictured here with a 152-pound shark he entered in the Metropolitan South Florida Fishing Tournament. He fished out of Miami Beach Castaway Docks. He will also receive a citation and arm patch for his catch.

Study of a track winner

By TOM MOORADIAN
Sports Editor

If in the next millennium one should be given the opportunity to return to this area and if Fred Price is around, the reincarnated body can be assured of one thing — Livonia Churchill will have a winner in track.

Price, the master kinesiologist, would make sure of that.

In a world of constant changes, one is confoundedly amazed at the way the Churchill track coach and his staff continue to harvest winners at the westend Livonia high school.

He's won more conference championships than any other track coach with maybe the exception of Joe Grasley at Cherry Hill, Price's present edition sports a 4-0 record.

Always discontent on past performances, Price's credos include the simple cliché: "records are made to be broken."

"And, as long as a kid has something to give, we're here to help," assures Price.

But Price and his colleagues — Dave Westover and Bob Armstrong — don't like the present philosophy being pumped out of the Michigan High School Athletic Association.

And before the shock waves hit East Lansing, home of that august body, let Price explain:

"MHSAA thinks that two coaches can coach a track team — it's impossible. Some of the schools don't even have two coaches but are handled by one man.

"Can you visualize a classroom filled with 60 or 70 students — what sort of result can one expect from that kind of classroom?" Price asked.

If that was a rhetorical question, let's hope someone who has paid his dues can answer it.

Price pointed out that, "it is hard to believe anyone getting results in a classroom situation where there is 'wall-to-wall students.'" Then how can one be expected to coach scores of track and field athletes who demand specialized attention?"

Of course one of the reasons for the cutback in coaches, including track, is because of the money crunch in school districts. People are just not voting for millages these days and the future doesn't look any brighter. It is an age of discontent and the effects of the millage failures touch not only the present generation of students and athletes but transcend beyond.

Schools are making those proverbial "butter-or-guns" decisions these days and one can only theorize and speculate what the consequences will be. And we just don't have the time to speculate today.

However, if the MHSAA continues to increase the number of track and field events — it has gone from 12 a few years ago to 16 presently, and if the MHSAA continues to force coaches to lure more athletes out for the sport — a subtle change in the scoring system, giving teams a point for a fourth place puts pressure on coaches to lure more athletes, then one can also be assured that more coaches will be throwing in the towel.

Patrons at The Red Apple in Belleville, who thought they were looking at Mark Fidrych, the Detroit Tiger pitching phenomena Monday, thought right.

Fidrych sneaked into town to be best man for a buddy and refused to make himself conspicuous — if that's possible.

The bushy haired Tiger who is recovering from a knee operation told manager John Eliz "that he preferred not to talk to reporters or anyone, because, after all it's the bride and groom's day — not mine."

The rains came

Washouts causing coaches headaches

By TOM MOORADIAN
Sports Editor

The rains may be conducive for growing crops and making grass greener, but the "torrential season" in these parts are causing havoc upon the high school baseball schedule. All of the weekend games were wiped out by the rains.

"We're going to try to reschedule the league games when we can," said Bill Hawley, athletic director at Wayne Memorial, "however, the nonleaguers may not be played because of scheduling problems."

Eight games were washed out Friday and Saturday's nonleague doubleheader between Wayne Memorial and Plymouth Salem also was cancelled.

Meanwhile, Cherry Hill managed to open up its 1977 Tri-River Conference campaign last week and second year Coach Ken Mientkiewicz probably would have preferred rain. The Spartans were left on the shortend of an 8-5 decision with Melvindale.

"It's the same old problem — lack of concentration—that is killing us," Mientkiewicz pointed out. "I feel we have a pretty good team, but we are making costly mental errors and that's costing us victories."

Cherry Hill went with Mark Lipinski on the mound in the opener and he was yanked after four innings. Lipinski, charged with the loss, gave up four runs on six hits while he fanned two and walked three before Scott Dawson relieved him.

The Spartans, who collected eight hits, rallied for three runs in the last of the seventh as Ron Sosnowski drilled a two-run homer over the center field fence, driving home Don Boren, who had singled.

With two away, Brian Shuster walked, advanced to second on a passed ball and scored when

Annual Belleville Relays set

Westland John Glenn will place its crown on the block Tuesday when the Western Wayne Relays are held at Belleville High School.

Glenn's biggest challenge should come in the form of an undefeated Livonia Churchill contingent which looks impressive thus far this season.

"I really don't know much about the rest of the field," said Glenn's Barry Basel, "however, looking over Churchill's times and performances for the year, I know they'll be tough."

Joining Glenn and Churchill at Belleville will be some 13 other prep track teams including Wayne Memorial, Inkster, Romulus, Cherry Hill, Garden City East, Garden City West, Taylor Kennedy, Taylor Center, Taylor Truman, Bentley, Franklin, and Dearborn Heights Robichaud.

"We expect some of the finest athletes in the area to compete here on Tuesday," noted Harry Hidenfelter, Belleville High's athletic director. "Some of these kids will undoubtedly leave their mark on the state meet."

This is the 19th running of the meet which is annually hosted by Belleville High.

There will be 13 relays and one individual event — the 2-mile run. Competition is scheduled to begin at 3 p.m. with the field events; the running events will follow soon afterward.

There is a $1 admission charge for both students and adults.

Funds needed for new track uniforms

Belleville to hold 24-hour run

Belleville High wants a "newer look" in track, and in order for the Tigers to get that brand new look, they'll have to raise the money themselves.

So, a 24-hour relay, set for 3 p.m. Friday until 3 p.m. Saturday, will be conducted in hopes of raising the necessary $900 for new track uniforms.

"We hope to get enough pledges from our fans to cover the expenditure," said Dave Medley, Belleville High head track coach. "We're going to have one baton going all the time and there will also be a period set aside for Belleville ex-trackmen and teachers to take part."

Meanwhile, Belleville launched the 1977 Suburban 8 Conference dual meet phase of the season on the shortend of a 109-49 decision with Edsel Ford.

The Tigers managed two first places with Bob Sayre, who tossed the discus 100 feet, 5 inches and Clarence Massey who won the shot put with a heave of 40 feet, 5 inches.

Belleville's scheduled meet with Plymouth Salem Tuesday was cancelled because of a death to a Salem athlete. Jeffrey J. Mangan, a half-miler, died last week after complications resulting from an appendicitis operation.

McMann's 4-hitter gives Romulus split with Monroe

Pitchers pop up out of some of the strangest places in high school baseball.

Ask Dennis Stoh, Romulus's head coach. He went behind the plate and drafted senior righthander, Don McMann, to pitch the second game of a twin bill against Monroe Jefferson.

And, like Billy Martin's "lineup from the hat", Stoh's strategy worked.

McMann twirled a four-hitter as the Eagle bounced back to beat Jefferson 6-2. Monroe won the opener 8-3 as Mike Marsidia took his second defeat of the season.

"McMann's our regular catcher," Stoh related, "and I figured I would use him on the mound and he pitched a real solid game for us."

McMann scattered four hits, struck out seven and walked four in a game called after five innings because of rain. The Eagle gave their "rookie" hurler six runs in the first inning and he managed to gather goose eggs until the fourth when Monroe scored their first run, then came back for their last in the fifth.

Kelly Summerfield started the Eagle first with a walk, stole second and moved to third when Eric Moore's grounder was misplayed. McMann then hit a sacrifice fly, scoring the first run, Jeff Frazee was safe on an error, then Bill Suggs and Tom Shick each walked.

Doug Daniels was hit by a wild pitch, forcing in the third run while Jim Sullivan drew a base on balls and Summerfield, up for the second time, latched on to a two-run single.

In the opening game, Romulus succumbed 8-3 as Monroe built up a 6-1 lead after three innings and never looked back.

Romulus outlast its rivals 11-10 as Summerfield collected three for four and Mike Williams. Frazer and Steve Venier each had two hits.

The split gave Romulus a 3-3 won-lost record.

Because of the financial crunch in the school district, Romulus has not been able to support a junior varsity team. The Eagles do have a "B" squad made up of sophomores and it whipped Milan 11-1 last week.

Russ Ayers, making his first appearance on the mound, tossed a nine-hitter and helped his cause with two hits that drove home three runs. Wally Brown also chipped in with two hits.

Rained out against Garden City East on Tuesday, Romulus pick up the baseball trail Thursday at Willow Run.

Churchill's Kielty sets discus record

A sensational toss by Dave Kielty has put the Livonia Churchill athlete among the top discus throwers in the state.

Kielty came up with a 164 foot effort in the discus as Churchill won a 91-67 victory over Bishop Borgess in a nonleague dual meet last Thursday.

The 6-1, 185-pound junior, "who is very fast," according to Coach Fred Price, "is one of the finest athletes around. The season is still very young and he's going to make a lot of headlines before he's done competing."

Kielty also won the shot put event with a put of 51 feet, 5 1/2 inches.

Churchill chalked up 12 of the 16 events and along with Kielty's impressive wins, the Chargers also received two individual first places from Tobin Jones who won the 2-mile run in 9:54.1 and the mile in 4:30.0.

"I feel we're going to be a very balanced team, not overpowering anyone, but a team that can score in every event," Price added.

The victory, Churchill's fourth in the current campaign, also stretched its winning streak to 13 over a span of two years.

Winekoff brothers win AAU mat medals

The Winekoff brothers — Carl and Rick — continue to shine in wrestling.

Rick captured a gold medal at the AAU Junior Olympics held in Brighton over the weekend. Rick, competing in the 15-16 year old age bracket, won a gold in the 154-pound class.

Carl was forced to settle for a silver when he lost in the finals of the 143-pound class for the 15-16 year olds.

Meanwhile, the Huron Valley wrestling Club hosted its first invitational and the Spartans, sponsored by the YMCA and coached by Ed Fowler, picked up five more medals.

Tom Gibson and Dave Stratton each finished third at 70 and 85 pounds, respectively, in the 11-12 bracket, while Ed Fowler earned a third place medal (9-10) at 59 pounds.

Victor Golden, a 58-pounder, and Phil Swan, a 72-pounder, earned third places in the 8-and Under category.

Wayne gals handed 1st setback in track

A veteran Monroe girls' track team handed Wayne Memorial its first defeat in the Great Lakes 8 Conference last week 80-56. The loss left the Zebras with a 1-1 league and 1-3 over-all record.

Wayne swept two of the three relays, winning the 440 thanks to Lori Jones, Lisa Nibert, Debbie Berry and Sonja Kozorsky who were clocked in 55.3.

The winning mile relay team of Julie Poster, Terri Discher, Miss Jones and Colleen O'Brien combined for a 4:40.2.

Miss Sheridan also won the shot put with a toss of 34 feet, 10 inches while Debbie Berry's leap of 16 feet, 8 1/4 inches was the best in the long jump. Lisa Nibert, one of the top high jumpers on the high school scene these days, cleared 5 feet, 4 inches for a victory in her specialty.

Tigers present 'rookie' coach with 2 victories

Dan Fisher must be living right. The rookie Belleville High head baseball coach has won his first two Suburban 8 Conference starts over perennial title contenders Plymouth Salem and Edsel Ford.

Fisher has served as a junior varsity coach for several years before getting the top job.

The Tigers clipped Edsel 4-3, scoring three runs in the last of the seventh and they also stunned Salem 6-5 to remain perfect in the league last week.

"We just hope we can continue this way," said Fisher. "we're playing aggressively on the base paths we're going to surprise a lot of teams."

Edsel got the first surprise. The T-Birds led 3-1 going into the bottom of the seventh as Belleville refused to quit.

Mark Cornett and Don Walls started the rally with a single, however, the next two batters were out on a fielder's choice and a sacrifice fly.

Edsel called upon reliever Mark Hanson to stop the uprising but Roy Rutherford walked, loading the bases, then Ben Collins belted a two-strike single for the tying runs and Jeff Smith smacked the game-winning single.

Walls finished the day with a double and single and Collins had two singles.

Lance MacArthur went the distance, struck out 12 and walked five for the victory. He gave up three hits.

Belleville exploded for six runs in the bottom of the fourth, again with two away, then held off Salem to post its second league triumph.

Greg Cicotte tossed a four-hitter and got some relieve help from Bill Hill in the sixth to pick up the decision.

Losing pitcher Bruce Gerish left in the fourth. He was touched for all six runs.

In that fourth, MacArthur singled, moved to second when Charlie Childers walked, then Mark Stoelton doubled in the first Tiger run. Collins made it a 3-0 ball game with a two-run double and a single by Rich Dapsit put Tiger runners on third and first. Mark Cornett hit to short who bobbled the ball, and Walls sliced a two-run single to account for the final Tiger run.

Rained out against Trenton on Monday, Belleville resumes play Thursday at home to arch-rival, Ypsilanti. The Tigers remain home Friday to host Allen Park, their third league rival.

Nancy Dickerson, prominent national correspondent, reports for Detroit Edison:

"After last winter's severe cold, a lot of homeowners are warming up to the electric heat pump. Here's why:"

Home pictured built by Guenther Building Company, Ann Arbor, Michigan.

Today's heat pump is one of the most energy-efficient ways to heat your home, apartment, office or commercial building. It returns over 1 1/2 units of heat for every unit of energy it uses.

Think what this can mean in conserving energy and helping to keep your heating and cooling costs down.

There's a unique reason why the heat pump is an outstandingly efficient heating system.

It makes good use of outdoor heat.

Yes. Even in winter there's heat in the outdoor air that can help keep you warm. The trick is to move that heat inside where you can use it. That's what the heat pump does. Only during very low temperatures is supplementary heat needed.

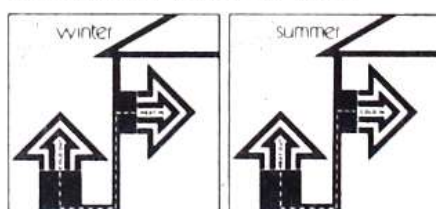

In summer, the heat pump moves heat out of your home for energy-efficient cooling. It's an all-year comfort system that also filters and dehumidifies. And it's clean because no fossil fuel is burned in your home.

The heat pump works something like your refrigerator.

A heat pump is more sophisticated, but it works in much the same way. Imagine the cold air in your refrigerator as the cold winter air outside your home. The hot air that you sometimes feel being blown into your kitchen is actually being extracted from the cold air inside the unit. This is how the heat pump warms your home. In summer, the process is reversed to cool your home: the heat in the inside air is extracted by the heat pump and moved outdoors.

Here's how the heat pump works.

See for yourself.

You can see heat pumps in the new homes displaying the Detroit Edison EEE Award. This Award is presented to builders who incorporate energy-efficient excellence standards into their homes—including proper insulation, energy-efficient appliances and lighting, as well as electric heat pump heating and cooling. Ask Detroit Edison for names and locations of builders who have EEE Award homes on display.

Conserving with comfort.

Detroit Edison wants you to know about the heat pump because it generally is the most energy-efficient way to provide homes and buildings with year-round comfort.

The heat pump can also be an important answer to conservation because the natural heat it uses helps save our non-renewable fossil fuels.

As a concerned participant in America's crusade for conservation, Detroit Edison is working hard to do its part. But it requires a working partnership between those who supply energy and those who use it. So if you're planning on buying, building or replacing your present heating system, consider a heat pump as part of your plans.

Detroit Edison has a folder, "Your all-season space conditioner, The Heat Pump." Pick one up at any Detroit Edison Customer Office and learn more about this energy-efficient way to heat and cool homes and buildings. Or write to: Customer Relations, Detroit Edison, 2000 Second, Detroit, Michigan 48226.

Conserve for all it's worth. The power is in your hands.

Wall-to-wall swim champions

Undeclared in the league, Wayne High girls and boys' swimming teams join Wayne Recreation Dolphins' Swim Club in this "picture of champions." All won titles this year, the girls claiming the Great Lakes 8 Conference championship with a perfect record, then the boys winning the inaugural Great Lakes 8 Conference crown. The Dolphins, made up of girls and boys of various age groups, also capped a perfect dual meet season with their league crown.

Cherry Hill runners bury Melvindale for 3rd victory

If there were any doubts in anyone's minds about Cherry Hill's capabilities of repeating as the Tri-River Conference track and field champ they should have been crushed last Thursday.

Coach Joe Grasley's Spartans unleashed their awesome track power to bury Melvindale 138½ to 16½. Cherry Hill captured 15 first places, most of them by sweeping the first three positions.

Melvindale's Dale Johnson prevented a Cherry Hill sweep of all 16 events when he won the shot put. "We're pretty decent for this time of the year," said Grasley whose team is now 3-0 on the over-all season. "We have two sophomores — Ivy Gregory and Daryl Gallant — who are doing an exceptionally good job for us."

Cherry Hill also dumped Taylor Truman, a member of the Great Lakes 8 Conference, 98½ to 59½, last week. The Spartans will resume their quest for an unprecedented fourth consecutive conference track title on Thursday against Taylor Kennedy.

Wayne netters post key win in Great Lakes 8 loop

When it came to tennis, Fordson had it pretty much its way against Wayne Memorial.

But Coach Jack Armstrong's Zebras changed that this year and won their first confrontation with the defending Great Lakes 8 Conference champs.

"We had never beaten Fordson in tennis prior to last week," Armstrong explained. "and, again the meet with them went right down to the wire."

"We each had four points, so the match was decided upon the total of game victories and we had the edge there 83 to 76," Armstrong said.

The victory evened up Wayne's conference record to 1-1 but the Zebras know they have along road ahead of them before they can even think about league championships.

"We're going to have to improve an awful lot to be able to win it this year," Armstrong continued. "But this is a step in the right direction."

Meanwhile, Wayne topped Livonia Franklin 5-3 in an area nonleague match-up. It was also the first time Wayne had ever beaten a Franklin tennis team.

Rockets are 'on target' over Fordson

With Kathy McDougall contributing three first places, Westland John Glenn's girls track team overpowered Fordson 83-57 in a nonleague meet.

Miss McDougall leaped 16 feet, 4½ inches to win the long jump competition, then ran a 11.9 to place first in the 100-yard dash and also hit the tape first in the 220-yard dash with a 27.1 performance.

The victory boosted Glenn's record to 4-1 on the season. Their only loss was sustained from an undefeated Bishop Borgess club.

ROBERT MORRISON

Morrison ends wrestling career

Though he got off to a slow start because of an injury, former All-Area grappler, Robert Morrison of Romulus, managed to finish with a .500 wrestling record at Northwestern University.

Morrison, a 177-pounder who is completing his senior year, chalked up a 12-12 won-loss record.

Morrison's fourth place finish in the Big 10 Conference earned for him a trip to Norman, Ok., where he competed in the National Collegiate Athletic Conference Invitational.

"Robert has been a steady performer for us," said Northwestern head Coach Ken Kraft, "however, the injury handicapped him this season."

Northwestern finished the year with a 11-2 dual meet record, the best in its history. It also finished fifth as a team in the Big 10.

Morrison earned his second stripe as a member of the Wildcats' varsity squad.

Wayne tankers show championship form

By GEORGE WHITEHEAD
Special Correspondent

Three times in the past six months swimming teams representing Wayne Memorial High School or the Wayne Department of Parks and Recreation have captured both season dual-meet and league-meet championships — a paramount achievement and an indication that a resurgence in swimming interest began several years ago is paying dividends.

The Wayne Memorial High School girls started the victory parade with a repeat of their 1975 title in early November, while the Zebra boys made it a Wayne Memorial sweep in the Great Lakes Eight Conference with their triumph in March.

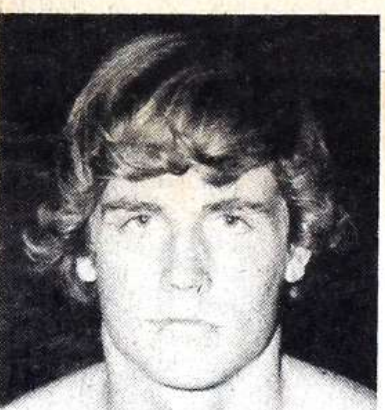

Then the Wayne Recreation Dolphin Swim Club completed the first season of Winter-Summer Swim Conference competition with an identical accomplishment of going undefeated in dual meets and then winning the conference championship April 2.

What these three devastating triumphs have in common is the mere fact that many of the same swimmers who paced the Wayne High teams also shared in the Dolphin glory. If the trend continues, many of those younger swimmers who spearheaded the Dolphin championship team could eventually be members of Wayne High championship teams.

As a matter of reference, most of the 1976 and 1977 Wayne High swim team members got their starts in the Dolphin program, having spent anywhere from four to six previous seasons as members of the Wayne Recreation Dolphin Club.

While the high school teams compete for only several months during the year, the Wayne Recreation Dolphin program is an ongoing one.

Preparation has begun for a 1977 summer program which includes competition in the Winter-Summer Conference, selected Amateur Athletic Union meet participation, hosting of the Wayne Invitational, a fund-raising Swim-A-Thon, and capped off by the Dolphin Junior Olympics and Awards Banquet.

JEFF LIEDEL

Liedel gets another swim award

Jeff Liedel, former All-Area swimmer from Belleville High School, won the coach's award for desire and inspiration at Bowling Green (Ohio) State University.

Prospective members for 1977 may attend tryouts May 18 at the Wayne High pool. At that time Coach Jim McPartlin and assistants Jim Lawrence and Kirk Johnston will evaluate each swimmer and recommend the next step in that swimmer's pursuit of becoming a Dolphin.

The tryouts are open to any boy or girl who is either a Wayne resident or a resident in the Wayne High School attendance area. Those present Dolphins or swimmers who achieved a varsity letter at their respective junior high schools need not attend tryouts, but are automatically encouraged to register for the summer Dolphin program either at the Wayne Recreation Center or through the Continuing Education department at Wayne High.

Registration for the summer season opens June 1.

Wolverines win 7 mat titles

The New Boston Huron Valley's inaugural Wrestling Tournament was apparently just what the doctor ordered for the Westland Wolverines.

The Wolverines struck for gold at the invitational as John Godzina (58), Robb Paciocco (90) and Keith Zimmerman (138) each finished first in their respective weight classes.

The Wolverines also had two runners-up with Dan Schimansky (61) and Mike Conboy (67) and finished fourth with Charles Lauber (67) and Steve Alewine (170).

Franklin is back on winning track

Livonia Franklin is back.
Coach Bob Holmes' Patriots, who have been playing second fiddle to Westland John Glenn, served notice last week that it will be a strong contender for the Northwest Suburban Conference track and field title race by whipping an excellent Northville squad 88½ to 69½.
The victory boosted Franklin's over-all won-lost picture to 3-1 on the season.

"We're just pleased to win," said Holmes whose athletes won 12 out of a possible 16 first places. We're improving with each meet and that's a very good sign."

Franklin resumes the Northwest Suburban title chase on Thursday at Thurston.

Ypsilanti to test Romulus' thinclads

Al Wilkerson has been building a track machine at Romulus High School that he hopes some day will be among the Class A powers in the state.

With only a handful of athletes three years ago, Wilkerson has now been able to put together a lineup that has won three in a row.

"Our big test will come Thursday when we run Ypsilanti," Wilkerson revealed. "If we can get pass them, then I feel we have arrived."

Meanwhile, Romulus downed Dearborn Heights Amapolis 101-57 and also beat a respectable Flat Rock 87-70 to remain perfect on the year.

"I'm exceptionally pleased at the way some of our sophomores are performing," Wilkerson said. "We have received some very excellent results from them."

Larry Young, one of those sophs, ran a 10.2 for the 100-yard dash while Franklin Holliday had covered the 2-mile in 10:35 and the mile in 4:52. He is also a sophomore.

Canton needs golfers

With 30 golfers ready to go, the Canton Parks and Recreation is seeking 10 more men to compete in summer-spring golf league.

"We're planning on having a 40-member league that will play out of Fox Hills," said Chuck Sheets, golf league director. "We welcome resident and non-resident golfers to register in this league.

The league will play from 5:40 p.m., Mondays and there is a $10 registration fee. Tee fees will be collected at the golf course.

problems when the Chargers met with Livonia Churchill.

Churchill bombed the Dearborn Heights' ball club 17-5 as the Livonians chased Crestwood's ace, Dave Jones after two and two-thirds innings.

Earlier, Churchill humbled Highland Park 13-1.

"We have been really hitting the ball," said Churchill's Rog Frayer. "We're aggressive on the base paths and every time I look up we have a man on second ready to score.

"Heck, we've scored 30 runs in two games — and that's not bad at all," Frayer added.

Bill Bardwell worked the first four innings and threw only 48 pitches against Crestwood. He struck out five and gave up three hits before Frayer relieved his starter to get a look at Dave Schomberger.

Schomberger finished up and was touched for five runs, four of which were earned.

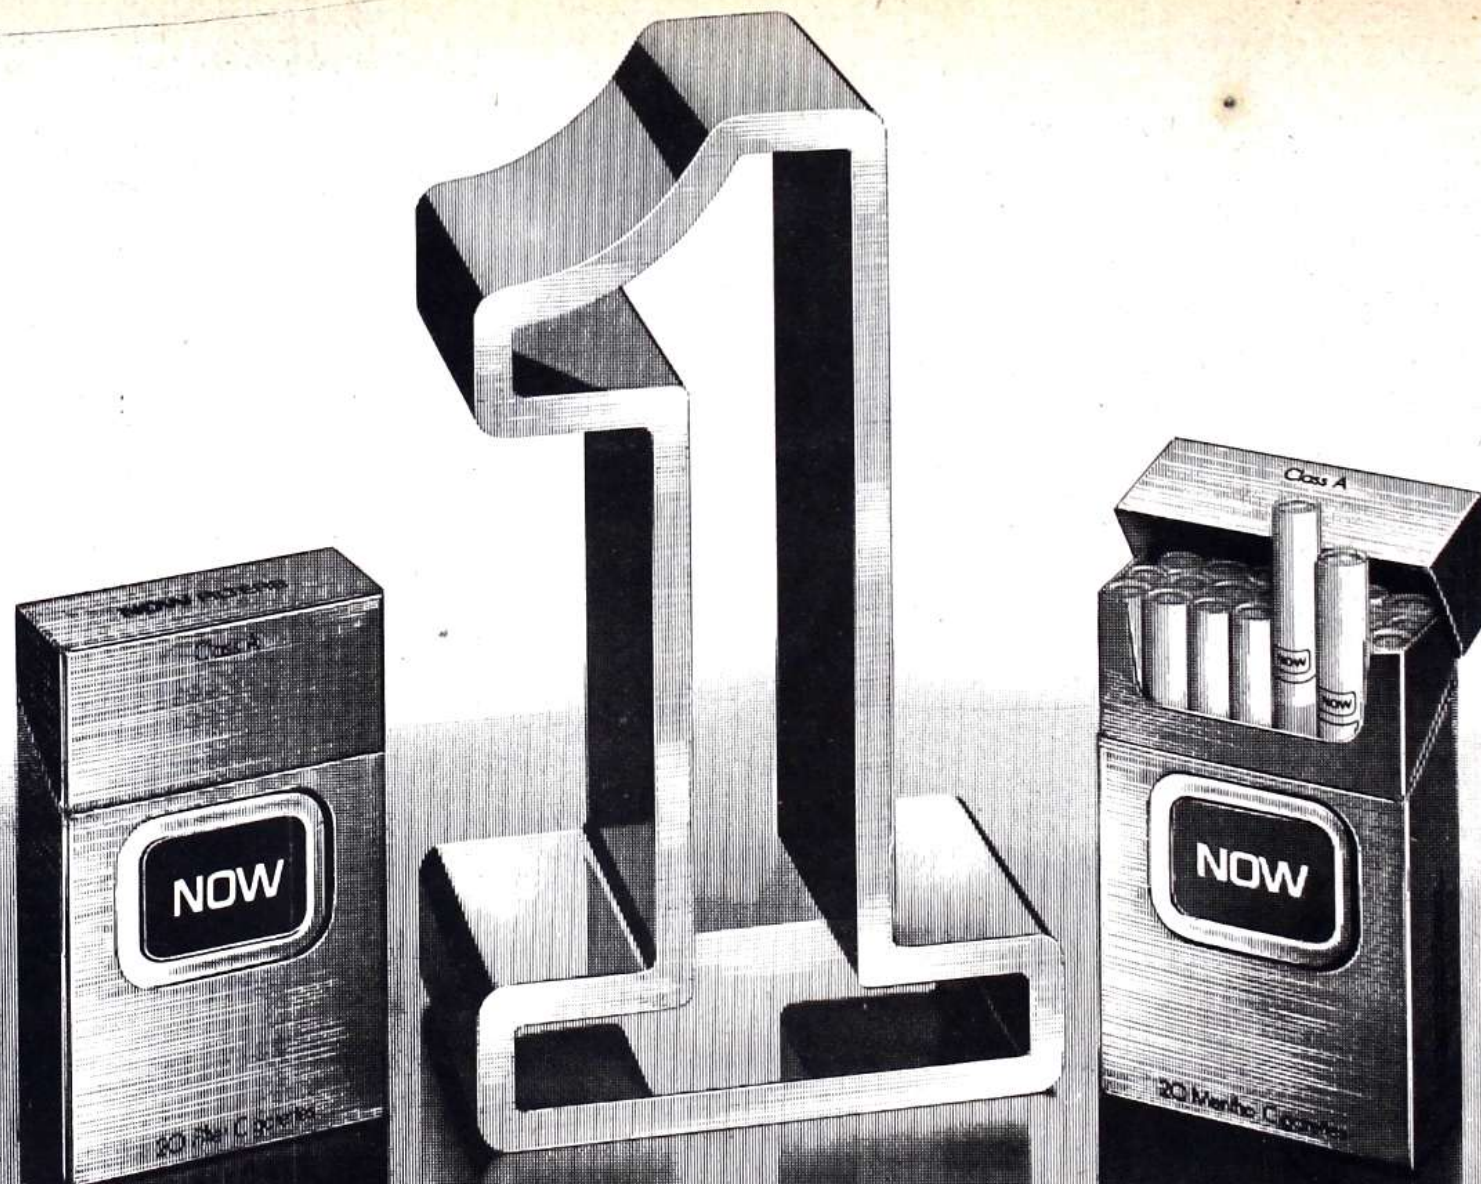

Mike Devlin had a field day as he belted four hits in five trips, including two doubles while Bardell helped his own cause with two hits and one run batted in.

Jeff Morris picked up the victory over Highland Park as he threw four innings, whiffed six and walked two. Matt Krakowiak then took over and worked the next two innings before Tim Stawara finished up.

Delvin, who has collected six hits in 10 official times at the plate, wound up with two singles while teammate Bill Coyle clobbered a home run to deep right center in the second inning and Ray Raymond connected on a fast-ball and sent it down the left field line, chasing home Marty Abraham for a two-run homer.

SHOPPING FOR CHEESE

The term "natural cheese" applies to cheese in its original form as contrasted with pasteurized process cheese, cold pack cheese and other types. The labels of natural cheese and other types of cheese carry important descriptive information you should check when shopping. Look for the name of the product: Cheddar cheese, Swiss cheese or Blue cheese. Do not confuse the BRAND name with the name of the cheese. Do not confuse true dairy products with the altered or "filled" cheese products appearing on the market. These contain some vegetable oil in place of some milkfat.

In age or degree of curing may be indicated on the label. Cheddar cheese may be labeled "mild", "medium" or "mellow", or "aged" or "sharp". In some cases pasteurized process cheese may be labeled to indicate a sharp or aged cheese was used in its preparation.

SUCCESSFUL CHEESE COOKERY

When cooking cheese, always keep the heat LOW. Cheese needs just enough heat to melt and blend with other ingredients. High heat or long cooking makes cheese tough and stringy. Dry heat, prolonged baking or high temperatures will produce leathery texture.

Add cheese to other ingredients in small pieces; it spreads more evenly and cooks in a shorter time. When making a cheese sauce, add the cheese just at the last minute and cook only until it melts. If cheese is to be grated or shredded, the job is easier if you work with cold cheese taken directly from the refrigerator.

Except for soft, unripened cheeses such as cottage cheese or cream cheese, all cheese tastes better served unchilled. This usually requires from 20 minutes to 1 hour at room temperature to bring out its distinctive flavor and texture.
